Hurricane Death Toll Pushes Closer To 300

Two Trains Collide; Six Dead; 21 Hurt

Kentucky Town Scene Of Crash On L&N Lines

GUTHRIE, Ky., June 29 (AP) — A Louisville & Nashville Railroad freight train rammed into the line's Chicago - Miami passenger train, the Dixieland, at a cross-over here today, killing six and injuring 21, the railroad reported.

C. H. Swallows of the L & N stationmaster's office in Nashville said these were the latest figures available to him, but added:

"Everything is a mess up there and the sheriff's having trouble keeping the crowd away so the ambulances can get to the injured."

Hits Diner

Swallows said the freight train rammed into the side of the passenger train dining car, turning it over and derailing five other cars, including three sleepers, a lounge car and baggage car.

"I imagine both trains were going at a pretty good clip," Swallows said. "The Dixieland doesn't even stop at Guthrie."

Joe Stibuerk, Chicago a steward in the dining car, said, "I had left the dining car and gone back to get some people. I got them—a woman and child who had asked me to call them.

"I looked out. Suddenly I saw this train coming. I said, "Jump into the rooms."

"They stood there dumfounded, but I pushed them in. Then we hit and it felt like the whole world was shaking loose.

"I came out and saw the way was blocked. My first thought was of the diner where I worked. I went back and came around. Chairs were thrown everywhere. The car was ripped open."

The engineer of the freight train, J. T. Raspberry, Paris, Tenn., was listed as dead. J. T. Smith of Louisville, fireman, jumped to safety, described events on the freight this way:

"I was on the walkie-talkie talking to A. M. Lashlee of Paris, the conductor. Smith was beside me and Raspberry was at the wheel. I looked up. I saw we couldn't make it. I landed on both feet, stumbled, but kept up. Smith was right behind me.

"Smith said, 'I'm going to jump. Jump quick!'

Lake Providence Beauty Pageant Climaxes Tonight

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — Twenty - six Southern Belles, described by master of ceremonies Bob Evans as the most beautiful and talented group of girls in all the beauty contests which he had worked with, were introduced to a huge crowd of spectators in the American Legion stadium last night, during the second of three days in the Miss Louisiana contest.

The event began as L. E. Townsend, Jr., president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce which is sponsoring the pageant, introduced Mayor W. B. Cone, who officially welcomed the spectators to the contest.

Evans then introduced Miss Bobbie Chachere, the reigning Miss Louisiana who will crown the new Miss Louisiana tonight.

Special Guest

A special guest presented to the spectators was Mrs. Louisiana, Mrs. Jeanette Kimbell of Ruston, who placed third in the national Mrs. America contest. Miss Judy Ragland, official hostess, was also introduced.

At this point, the 26 lovely contestants, in hoop - skirted evening gowns, were presented.

The contestants, divided into two groups, then competed in the evening gown, swim suit, and talent

Talent Winner

Singing an aria from "The King and I," Beverly Leigh Norman, Miss Caddo Parish, last night won in the talent competition. Friday night, she was judged first in the swim suit competition. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. U. Norman of Shreveport, she is a sophomore at Centenary College, majoring in voice. Nineteen - years - old, she is 5 - 5, weighs 118, measures 36-23-36.

Col. Nickerson Suspended; Gets Fine, Reprimand

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., June 29 (UP)—A general court martial suspended Col. John C. Nickerson, Jr., from rank for a year, fined him $1,500 and reprimanded him today for his admitted leakage of secrets in a "Billy Mitchell"' fight for Army missiles.

It was a "magnificent victory," as his lawyer put it, and perhaps a historic one for the 41-year-old colonel who could have received up to 30 years at hard labor. It was scored in the teeth of testimony from his commanding officer, Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, who said that Nickerson had lost his usefulness to the service and he did not want him back on his staff.

Nickerson's fine will come on the installment plan. He was sentenced to forfeiture of $100 a month for 15 months.

Anticipates Transfer

It was the least he had to say at any point in the whole five-day court martial that started off with Nickerson pleading guilty and then building up an eloquent case why he should be let off lightly.

His pretty, prematurely graying wife was grinning and beaming. His teen-aged son and daughter danced happily although they did not fully understand what it was all about.

Deprived of Privileges

Nickerson's suspension of rank simply means he can not hold a command. He is deprived of the right to sit on military boards and of the privileges of rank.

Nickerson could have received up to 30 years, heavy fines, forfeiture of pay and retirement and dismissal from the Army.

AT U. S. AIR BASE

Japanese Police Break Up Rioters

TACHIKAWA, Japan, June 29 (AP)—A squad of 170 Japanese police scattered 50 leftist demonstrators today and uprooted three tall whiplike poles placed at the end of a runway to harass U. S. pilots at the big Air Force base here. The demonstrators oppose extension of a runway.

It was the latest in a series of public displays of displeasure near the base over the past two years. A major Japanese film company is shooting a feature movie near here based on the situation, and some of today's demonstrators were later hired as extras at a fee of about $1 per head.

Extending Runway

The runway is being extended to accommodate the newest jet fighters and bombers. Japan, which eventually will acquire the base, is financing the extension. Farmers claim they are only getting a pittance for land being taken for the project. The demonstrators today came from nearby Sunakawa village. They were egged on by leftist student groups and others.

The poles — one 60 feet high and the other two 46 feet—were put up Friday by the villagers. The U. S. Air Force protested they were a hazard to flying.

No one was injured in the brief scuffle over removal of the poles from which fluttered banners of a leftist student group and the Japanese national flag. No arrests were made.

The demonstrators marched to Sunakawa and ripped the doors off the village police station. A riot squad was summoned to quell the disturbance.

While this was going on other Sunakawa villagers lined up in front of the movie camera crew and re-enacted the struggle near the runway.

Officials of the Toei Studios said their picture will be titled "Plane Noise and Earth," and "depicts the tragedy of police and landowners fighting over American bases." They said it is not anti-American.

Jes' Ramblin'

In keeping with the onward progress of the Twin Cities are the plans for the YMCA and YWCA here. In the short time that the former group has been organized here and directed by a highly capable man, Charles A. Wood, unusual progress has been achieved. But this is only the beginning. The budget for next year, according to Wood, general secretary, should be $60,000, if the present progressive growth is maintained.

At this time, 200 boys and girls are in day camp where they are enjoying indoor and outdoor activities.

Wood reports that last year 107 boys learned to swim at day camp and still a larger number are expected to do likewise this summer.

Next year will hold much interest for the "Y" for it's planned to hold an extensive drive to finance the large and completely equipped new building that is to be erected, according to present plans.

At this time, Wood states that 31 school areas are served by the "Y". Of these 16 lie east of the river and the others are in the area of West Monroe.

Eyeing with deep interest the progress of St. Joseph's Catholic Church is the Rev. Michael G. Hannon. He is a new priest here

Senators To Probe Hike In Steel Prices

WASHINGTON, June 29 (UP) —The Senate Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee will investigate recent price increases ordered into effect by U. S. Steel and other major industrial producers.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) announced plans for the inquiry today.

He said the first phase will deal with industry's pricing policies in general. Later, he said, the subcommittee will study particular industries.

He said a group of economists will be questioned July 9 and 11 about "administered" prices — that is, prices which are fixed by a company by executive decision rather than set in the competitive market place.

Request Financial Data

In a statement announcing the subcommittee's investigation, Kefauver called attention to the $5-a-ton increase just announced by U.S. Steel and other steel producers. Informed sources said the subcommittee will request, in preparation for hearings on the steel industry, complete operational data on which the companies based their action.

Walter P. Reuther, vice president and chairman of the Economic Policy Committee of the AFL-CIO, today branded the U.S. Steel increase as "unjustifiable, socially irresponsible and dangerously inflationary."

'Contemptuous Response'

"It is big business" contemptuous and defiant response to the appeal of President Eisenhower only last Wednesday for restraint by industry in initiating price increases," Reuther said.

At his Wednesday news conference, the President expressed new concern about the dangers of inflation and called on both business and labor to exercise "statesmanship" in avoiding unreasonable price and wage demands.

U.S. Steel cited a new round of wage increases granted its employes as the main reason for raising its prices. Reuther said:

Reuther Blames US Steel

"The facts on steel prices and steel wages prove conclusively that U.S Steel's effort to blame the price increase on increased labor costs is completely false."

He said that in 1939, U.S Steel's profits per man-hour worked, before each employe was given wage increases "totaled" this year in the first three years of 1957 of $1.80 for each hour worked by each employe—a fabulous increase . . . of 1,284 per cent."

Reuther said "the present inflation is artificial because it has been artificially rigged by a few corporations who, because of their dominant position in industry, set the price of their products without any relation to the laws of supply and demand."

Mrs. Wilenzick, Prominent Here, Dies; Rites Set

Mrs. Irene G. Wilenzick, member of a prominent Monroe family, died at her residence here at 7 p.m. yesterday.

AT CAMERON

Doctor's Wife And One Child Found Alive

CAMERON, La., June 29 (UP) — Dr. Cecil W. Clark, 32, Cameron's only doctor and one of the heroes of the hurricane, learned today that his wife and one of his children are safe, but that three other children are missing.

His wife, Sybil, 32, and one child were located at a refugee shelter in Lake Charles, La. The other three children were understood to have drowned.

Although he was tortured by worry over his family, Dr. Clark worked until he almost dropped in the Cameron parish courthouse, treating the sick and the injured.

This is his story:

"I have a little 12-bed hospital in Cameron. I live about four miles west of town.

"Tuesday, I delivered a pair of twins and another baby at the hospital. I had another patient there, a man with a banged-up knee.

Reports To Hospital

"About 2 a.m.—this was Thursday the day of the hurricane—I got a call at home that the water was getting up on the road and I ought to come to the hospital.

"I dressed, jumped in my car and started toward Cameron. The wind was howling, getting stronger all the time. Rain was coming down in sheets. Water kept rising on the road. I was only creeping.

"Finally, after about two miles I turned in at the home of Jimmy Doeurn, a banker. He has a stone house, which incidentally is the only place out there that hasn't

Shreveport Man Leaps To Death

NEW ORLEANS, June 29 (AP)—Charles Snyder, 51, of Shreveport, leaped off the Lake Pontchartrain causeway and drowned today, state police said.

He left a note scrawled on an envelope in his parked car on the causeway. Troopers said it asked the finder to notify his family in Hammond.

The body was recovered.

ON CIVIL RIGHTS

Ellender Blasts Ike's 'Hypocrisy'

WASHINGTON, June 29 (UP)—Sen. Allen J. Ellender today accused President Eisenhower of "downright hypocrisy" in advocating pending civil rights legislation while saying he favors states' rights.

The Louisiana Democrat, urging the President to withdraw his support from the administration's civil rights program, said Eisenhower "has an opportunity to prove to the nation that he means what he says, that he practices what he preaches, and most important, that he will not yield up his announced principle in favor of political expediency."

Ellender called attention to Eisenhower's statement to the nation's governors earlier this week that he favors protection of state's rights. But, Ellender added, the President's civil rights bill "cuts the heart out of states' rights."

Filibuster Certain

"It is a mystery to me how President Eisenhower can advocate this legislation, how he can use the influence and prestige of his office to press for its passage, and at the same time, have the temerity to say he favors the rights of states. It is downright hypocrisy," the senator said in a radio broadcast.

The Senate is headed for an inevitable filibuster when advocates of the measure move to bring it up for action, probably during the week of July 8.

An unofficial "armistice" bars any such move next week, when the Senate will be pushing to complete action on necessary appropriations bills.

Lost First Test

Opponents lost their first test last week when the Senate voted 45-39 to bypass its Judiciary Committee, headed by Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.), and place the House-approved civil rights bill on its calendar.

A similar bill has been stalled in the Judiciary Committee for months.

Ellender warned that any move to take up the bill "will bring forth a filibuster." He said that is "the only weapon left to those of us who believe in constitutional government and the rights of the American people to govern themselves."

FOUGHT OFF SNAKES

Broussard Family Member Relates His Fight For Life

By SOSTHENE BROUSSARD
Told to United Press

PECAN ISLAND, La. (UP) — My son-in-law, Steven Broussard, wanted us to come to his house. The storm was just beginning. It was about 7 o'clock Thursday morning.

The water began to come up fast about 9 o'clock. And it was just a little while—maybe half an hour later—when the house was struck by a big wave and knocked off the blocks.

The house began to float in a north-northwest direction across the marsh.

Waves Get Higher

I guess the house floated more than a mile when it struck one of Dr. Martin's levees. (Dr. Martin Miller of New Orleans, owner of approximately 6,000 head of cattle reported to have been in the area before the hurricane struck.)

The wind and the waves got stronger and stronger. Suddenly, the house moved and we were floating again.

We floated a little and the house jammed against another levee. We thought we were safe but in just a few minutes the house began to move again.

Steven's house is big—four bedrooms, kitchen, dining room, living room, two baths and a big front and back porch. A part of it was added about a year ago.

House Falls Apart

I looked out the window. The front of the house is in White Lake, the back is bumping against the bank.

Then the old part of the house and the new part came apart. The roof on the old part came off; the porch tore away on the front.

The waves were bouncing the house around like a boat. The two parts kept floating close together.

Steven says we ought to move off the old part of the house to the new part which was stronger.

We all got to the new part and crawled straight to the attic because water was getting deeper and deeper in the house.

Steven knocked a hole in the

MOST LOST SOMEONE

Survivors Bare Tragedy Of Audrey's Tidal Wave

Editors Note: New Orleans Item reporter Phil Johnson talked with survivors as they were evacuated from their homes in the coastal area. They tell their story of the tragedy.

CAMERON, La., June 28 (UP)—Norman Wood of Cameron lost his three boys, two of them twins. He tells his story:

"I lost my three boys. They drowned. Two were twins, nine months old. The other was seven. My wife and me and our two older boys made it.

"I had the twins. I was holding them tight. I didn't want them to die. But the water was pushing on me. It covered me. And I had to hold on to the tree.

"Sometimes your brain tells you to do something but your body don't listen. That's what must have happened. I was holding them. And when I couldn't hold them no longer, well . . .

In Tree Six Hours

We hung in a tree six hours. I didn't know my wife was saved till I heard her cry. I looked down and saw her. My two boys climbed on a floating roof. Our house is gone. It collapsed when the water came. Most of the houses collapsed. I wish I could have held on to my boys.

Mrs. Earl Mouton of Cameron told how nine persons in one house drowned.

"Eleven of us were in the house. Nine drowned. I lost my brother. Mr. La Fort and his family, they were with us. They all drowned . . . him and his wife and their four kids.

We were in the attic. We figured that would be the safest place. But the wind blew the roof off halfways.

Roof Slippery

We all climbed out on the roof. It was slippery and some couldn't hold on. My sister never got out of the house. My brother was going back for my mother. He wanted to get her on the roof. He never did come back.

Me and my husband, we held tight on the roof. I don't know how long we dritted. All the while the water was beating down on us. We got all scratched up from the roof. After a day and a night they found us.

Hubert Theriot, 83, of Cameron told his story:

"I stood on tiptoes all night to keep from drowning. We were up in the attic of the house . . . up in the rafters. And the water kept rising. I was there and my daughter, and her family. We stayed up in the attic. We were

Bitter Feud Erupts Over Forecasters

LAKE CHARLES, La., June 29 (UP)—A bitter argument developed tonight over whether the victims and the survivors of Hurricane Audrey's terrible onslaught along the Louisiana coast were warned to flee in time.

A clearer picture of the disaster was emerging from official sources. It showed: 275 dead; 200-300 missing; unestimated hundreds injured and sick; 1,205 homes in Cameron parish, La., destroyed and 100 more badly damaged.

In addition to the damage and misery Hurricane Audrey visited upon Louisiana Thursday, it left 11 dead and six million dollars worth of damage in Texas and killed 19 other persons as it drove north of Louisiana into Canada.

Warning Late

Survivors charged that the New Orleans weather bureau, which predicted the hurricane's movements, said it would hit the coast Thursday night and that it actually hit Thursday morning.

Cameron, a fishing town of 2,500 population on the Louisiana Coast, and half-a-dozen villages were engulfed between 9 and 10 a.m. Thursday by a giant tidal wave.

Ray Kraft, forecast supervisor at the New Orleans weather bureau, said it wasn't in his heart to argue with the suffering survivors, but that residents of the coast were warned 24 hours before Audrey struck that they should get out.

He said there is no way to predict a tidal wave, once a storm has struck.

Forecasters Praised

"The warning was given 48 hours prior to the time the hurricane struck," Maj. Gen. Haymond Hufft, Louisiana's adjutant general and civil defense chief, said.

"The forecast was as true as any forecast ever made. The weather bureau should be complimented for its accuracy."

F. W. Reichelderfer, chief of the Washington weather bureau, arrived in New Orleans and praised Kraft. He said the forecasts were "among the best ever issued" and commented:

"Unfortunately, we cannot take them by the hand and lead them out of danger areas."

275 Feared Dead

President Eisenhower said at Gettysburg, Pa., that he understands at least 211 persons were killed and the destruction is "worse than they thought." Southwest Civil Defense headquarters estimated 275 dead in Louisiana and 200 to 300 missing.

The impression seemed to be growing among leaders close to the tragedy that the eventual total of dead in Louisiana would turn out to be around 275.

Sixty-one bodies were recovered. Some, identified, were parcelled out to undertakers. A boatload of ice was shipped up from the Texas coast to preserve the others in the icehouse at Cameron.

Holly Beach Demolished

United Press Reporter James M. Flinchum radioed that he was on a sheriff's boat picking up 15 or 20 more bodies at the north end of Big Lake, which is north of Cameron.

He found the community of Holly Beach demolished. Johnson Bayou, another community, was 75 per cent wrecked. Grand Chenier, where 700 persons lived, was demolished. All these points are lucky. Our house was one of the few that didn't blow down.

Water Came Higher

The water kept coming up higher. Finally we all had to stand up. It was right up to my chin. And every time a big wave came it covered my face. I had to watch my breathing.

I tell you . . . I've seen many a storm. But I've never seen anything as bad as that. It was the worst.

Mrs. Ernest Miller of Grand Chenier, who lost her husband and boy:

"My husband's dead. He was drowned. My little boy, too. He was only five. My father-in-law's drowned.

Water Just Came

I didn't hear nothing. Nobody hollered. The water just came on us. Like if somebody threw a big tubful on us. It took the house right from over our heads. The wind pushed us down and the water choked us.

I grabbed my boy. He's six but he can't swim. I would have grabbed my husband but I couldn't see him. I grabbed my boy and got on top of the roof. It was like a raft. We were on it all day and all night. The water beat us. And the rain. My boy hurt his head. We drifted 18 miles on that roof. Then they found us and brought us in.

James L. Miller of Cameron said:

"I bet I got more holes in me than a piece of Swiss cheese. I was holding onto this roof, see . . . and them nails just tore the devil outta me. Fifteen hours I was in the water. I'd slip off the roof and swim back and grab on, then slip off again.

"Jimmy got out his pickup truck and drove ahead of me, trying to help me get into Cameron. I figured that if any car drowned out, we could go in his pickup.

"The water started sweeping us off the road. We had to give up. By the time we got back to his house at 3:45 a.m., the water was waist-deep.

"It rained and blew and blew. We stayed in his house until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and then we were able to walk into Cameron.

"I met somebody on the road who told me there wasn't a thing standing out where I live.

"Sheriff O. B. Carter told me there wasn't any use going to the hospital, since all of the injured were being brought to the courthouse. I've been here ever since. Fortunately, most of the injured are not critically hurt. Many of them have broken bones.

During the afternoon, a colorful parade was held, with floats, all 26 contestants in swim suits, the Confederate Cannoneers, famed marching band, the Lakes Providence riding clubs, bands and many other groups.

The Rainbow Girls won frst place in the float competition, and the St. Patricks' Mothers' Club placed second in the parade which started at 2:30 p.m. on Main street, and made its way to the Legion field.

We stayed that way for more than two hours, I guess, with the two parts of the house floating across the lake together, maybe three miles or more out in the lake.

Then a big puff of wind and a lot of rain and another big wave came and the back house busted all to pieces and scattered over the water. Floating pieces of timber began to hit us and our part of the house was beginning to break up beneath us.

The attic floor began to break. I was holding 6-month-old Estelle and when he (Steven) was climbing up to the roof, the baby got pinned between me and a rafter.

Baby Slips Away

The baby was drinking water and I was drinking water. I tried to pull myself to the roof and hold the baby. Then a big wave came and knocked me hard.

The baby got away. I tried to catch her but I couldn't.

My daughter, Florence, called to me—"Papa, catch me," she said.

Steven and I pulled her back on the roof. She was holding the baby, Michael. He is 2. There was nothing beneath us now but that section of roof and it was breaking apart.

Hang on To House

Suddenly, another section of roof floated almost on top of it. Steven said "catch it, Papa," and I caught it and held on and Steven handed me the children and we all crawled on that roof.

We would hold to one another to keep from being washed away.

Right next to us floated a side of the house with two windows in it. I told them half of us would get on that.

My wife and three of the girls—Carolyn, 8, Larissa, 3, and Veronica, 4, got on this. It got away before Steven and the others could get on.

Steven and my daughter had Beatrice, 5, Steven Jr., and Michael.

Driftwood Hits

I don't know what time this was but the waves were getting higher and higher.

A big wave threw a piece of driftwood almost on top of us. My wife was holding Larissa and I was hanging on to Veronica and Carolyn.

Driftwood hit us again and we were all knocked off the raft.

My wife lost Larissa and only saved herself by grabbing hold of a piece of electric wire which was hanging on the side of the house.

I helped my wife back on but it was hard because I was holding on to Veronica.

I told the baby, "Veronica, you hold to Grandpa's neck because I got to help Grandma."

Another wave came hard and my wife and Carolyn was thrown almost on top of us.

Veronica lost her hold on my neck. Before I could catch her, she was gone.

It was beginning to get dark. The side of the house, our raft, was beginning to break apart. And then we hit something.

We crawled on it. It was the Stanolind camp. I knew then we had come clear across the lake.

There we hung on with the water high on us through the rest of the night and into daylight.

At daylight the moccasins as big as your arm were swimming around us. I was hitting them with a brush to keep them away from us. Some of them, so tired from swimming, I could pick up and throw away but they would come back trying to get on us or anything to get out of the water.

It was eight o'clock this morning (Friday) when I looked up to see the boat coming toward us.

Bitter Feud Erupts Over Forecasters

30 to 40 miles below Lake Charles.

Four FBI men were on their way to help identify bodies, which were becoming a health problem because of the heat and humidity. Doctors and Civil Defense leaders met to decide whether the best thing might be to simply hold a mass burial for the unidentified.

Venomous moccasin snakes, run out of the edges of the swamps by the high water, were a problem. Sixty vials of snake-bite serum were sent to Cameron for persons bitten by serpents.

But the shell road south to Cameron was reported open and light trucks were reported using it. Dr. Joe Hertell of Atlanta, Ga., southeastern medical director for the Red Cross, said "everything is under control" and no more doctors, nurses or medical equipment are needed.

Before the hurricane struck, 25,000 persons lived in Cameron parish. Not counting rescue workers, about 5,000 were left.

"Of whatever value Cameron parish had, only 30 per cent remains," Joe Flanagan, fire services control director for Calcasieu parish (Lake Charles) said.

Winds Hit 105 MPH

Kraft, supervising chief of the New Orleans weather bureau, emphasized that the tidal wave struck the coast Thursday morning, probably around 9 a.m. He said the first winds of the hurricane were from the east, blowing up to 105 miles an hour.

Courthouse Stands

Then, when the center of the hurricane passed to the west of Lake Charles and Cameron, the wind shifted from east to south, blowing in squarely from the gulf.

"This would have brought in the water and waves from an already rising gulf," Kraft said. "Here's what probably happened—the gulf was standing nine or 10 feet above normal level and waves came on top of that."

Courthouse Stands

"We will know later when we can measure the walls of the Cameron courthouse."

The courthouse in Cameron one of the few buildings that rode out the hurricane and tidal wave without major damage.

In the courthouse, still working at last report, in dirty polo shirt and water-soaked trousers, was one of the heroes of the storm. He was Dr. Cecil W. Clark, 32, still setting bones and giving morphine shots to the suffering.

"I'm doing no more than anybody else. Everybody's pitched in," he said.

Some Residents Return

More than 1,000 rescue workers—soldiers, airmen, coast guardsmen and civilians—were working today at Cameron, which serves as a collection point for the wi[illegible] area.

The whole area swarmed [illegible] boats and helicopters w[illegible] overhead, picking up the [illegible] the hurricane's refugees. [illegible] residents of Cameron—the t[illegible] population was about 750—ca[illegible] rides down the Calcasieu R[illegible] today from Lake Charles to [illegible] what was left of their home[illegible]

They were persons who [illegible] aged to get aboard the first b[illegible] leaving Cameron Friday for La[illegible] Charles and who had spent the night in a refugee center set up in the rodeo arena at McNeese College.

Mrs. Percy Dyson, whose husband is a shrimper, sat quietly in the refugee center, with her daughters, Martha, 11 months old, and Gloria, 3, sharing her lap.

House Shattered

She said her son David, 4, was with her husband. They saved themselves by going to the courthouse the night before the hurricane struck.

"There isn't a splinter left of our house," she said. "Everything is gone. My husband says we're not going back, but I'd like to go back and see where the house stood.

Because of sanitation problems, the refugee center at McNeese College was closed and buses took hurricane sufferers to various schools. Elray Lesle, a Negro who lived in Cameron, said he and his family were hard hit.

"My house is gone," he said. "The wind and the water got it. I spent the night (Thursday) at a lumberyard office, then went to the fish docks where a boat picked me up."

How many relatives did he lose?

"A sister-in-law, two nieces, a bunch of cousins and an uncle," drowned or blew away."

Accident Victim Reported 'Fine'

Frances Thompson, 13, of Rayville, who was injured when she was thrown from a car Friday afternoon was reported yesterday as "doing fine" at Confederate Memorial Hospital in Shreveport, where she was taken by ambulance Friday night.

She suffered a compound fracture of the left arm, a dislocated shoulder and possible head injury. The driver of the car, Victor Best, 22, also of Rayville, was released from the Rayville clinic yesterday. He was shaken up by the mishap. Three other youngsters, Stella Finley, 14, Eddie Wayne Thompson, 7, and Helen Thompson, 15, passengers in the car, were released from the clinic Friday night. The car, which turned over [illegible] times, was demolished.

and he is delighted with the opportunities he sees for a great future for the work of the church in Monroe and vicinity.

Bids were opened for the erection of the St. Joseph church on Benton Avenue the past week. Its site is at the corner of Dick Taylor street. The lowest bid was submitted by Harry Carpenter and was for $75,870. It was taken under advisement and it appears it will be accepted.

The project calls for three buildings in the group. The center building will be a two-story sanctuary, and a few feet distant to the west of the sanctuary will be the rectory, a one story building and to the east not far distant from the sanctuary will be St. Joseph's hall. The two buildings flanking the sanctuary are to be one story and all three will be of masonry and brick veneer. Plans were drawn by Architect Paul Stewart.

Members of the YMCA have received through the mails from Charles A. Wood, Jr., general secretary of the Twin Cities YMCA, a notice that a watermelon sale is planned at 1406 Louisville ave July 1, 2 and 3 from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

One half of the proceeds of this sale will be used to send deserving boys and girls to the YMCA and YWCA day camp this summer.

This project seems quite worthy and is to be conducted by the North Monroe Kiwanis club in its special effort to help the work of the groups who will be in charge of projects.

It was Pie Gaspard. He pulled us out of the water and into his little boat.

Pretty soon Mr. Streeter and Broussard and Earl Hardin came by in a bigger boat with Steven and my daughter and Steven Jr. and Michael.

Steven said the boy (Steven Jr.) was bitten by one of the moccasins during the night. He was hit on the right ear and his face was beginning to swell up double.

When we got in the ambulance at Little Prairie, where they met us, the boy was talking out of his head and he was turning purple.

The boy died before we could reach the hospital.

I don't know why we are alive.

Wildlife And Fisheries To Drop 56 Seismic Employes

BATON ROUGE, June 29 (AP)—Civil Service Director W W. McDougall said today 56 seismic agents will be dropped off the Wild Life and Fisheries rolls effective tomorrow.

On June 25, the state Civil Service Commission directed the department to drop all agents hired since a commission order last fall removing the jobs from classified service.

The commission declared the order null and void, in effect having never been issued, in April, claiming wild life and fisheries officials had misrepresented the situation, McDougall said.

Travel With Crews

Seismic agents travel with seismographic crews in their search for Louisiana oil to see to it no damage is done to wild life.

"The seismic agents are employed on an intermittent basis," he explained. "They have to hire somebody to go out with them. They may have a large number who are not really on pay status, but it is necessary that they have more agents on rolls than jobs at any given time."

Wild Life and Fisheries officials told the commission last fall they were having trouble hiring seismic agents, McDougall said.

Dropped Requirements

The commission dropped civil service requirements, he said, and "in the interim Wild Life and Fisheries hired 56 persons with the result they were the ones called to duty and long standing employes were not given the assignments."

"The commission issued a stop pay order, effective June 30," McDougall said, "and the department has complied with it.

He continued, "the order would have the effect of placing the department back to the regular force. We won't approve of hiring of any more people until they show us the people on the rolls are not enough to fill all the assignments that come up.

"There never has been a complaint when the department called the men to jobs first who had been first laid off," he said. "We've received numerous complaints since they abandoned that system. We have asked Wild Life and Fisheries to adopt an orderly system, and they have agreed to go back to the former system."

Crossett Housewives Now Artists

By JANICE CLARK
Correspondent

CROSSETT — We have long suspected that anyone who really wants to, and is willing to put a bit of time and enthusiasm into the project, can learn to draw and and paint creatively — at least to a point where many exciting hours can be spent in interpreting his surroundings on paper.

During the past five months a group of Crossett's women have proved that this is true — beyond a doubt. A group of six "girls" came to us in February and asked if we should help them get started in learning to draw. Although we didn't expect to hold their interest more than a week or so, we agreed to take a try at giving them a start at a hobby that we have enjoyed for many years.

Pads And Charcoal

They all started with big newsprint pads, a piece of charcoal or conte crayon, and an easel. First, the beginning group of six were taught to "bring out form" — that is how to make square things look square and round objects round, creating the illusion of three dimensions. From there they moved on to learning to separate objects from their surroundings by contrasting tonal quality.

They were taught to compose their space — that is, weave their subject matter into a total composition, leaving no dull, static areas on their canvas.

By this time the group was growing in numbers and in directions of interest. There are now 13 women, and they are working in charcoal, conte crayon, pastels, oils and one is about to start her first scratchboard.

They have done numerous still life arrangements, a gaunt, time-shattered magnolia tree, a little frame church, a simple rural house, and of course a pair of magnolia blossoms.

The howls of frustration that went up over their first head-on collision with perspective (on the church) were enough to frighten their teacher into returning to her pots and pans. But some wonderful creations came out of that session. The magnolia suffered indescribable insults as they struggled with the delicate tonal values which separated its petals.

And the magnolia tree turned up with as many interpretations as there were pupils. One composed it as a happy, well - adjusted tree under a sunny sky. Another (who hadn't yet mastered leaves) painted a gaunt, storm-shattered tree with not ones single leaf.

Another painted a dead tree (she didn't like coping with foliage either) on a sluggish bayou. A snake sunned itself on a gray limb, while across the stream flowers bloomed amid lush green —in happy contrast to the grim skeleton of a once magnificent tree.

From last week's lesson an old mop, a dented bucket, and a scrub brush were transformed into compositions that emphasized the swirling movement of the mop against the stolid lines of the bucket and brush, with an entire composition including the vague lines of the doorway and kitchen in the background.

So — The girls have begun to learn about truly creative art, as opposed to the simple aping of nature.

The group has remained absorbed in their new hobby. In fact, most of them definitely "have the bug." They drop by over and over during the week with a creation, for a word of praise or for help, and will say, "I just hate every minute I have to be doing something else."

One mother of five small children drives in 30 miles each week for her lesson — and somehow between the cooking and sewing and child care, she has shown so much ability that her teacher would take the trip to her if necessary to help unlock her great store of creative talent.

Some were in such tight knots of doing little timid sketches on tiny sheets of paper that it has been exciting just to watch them bloom out all over the big newsprint pad. All are having great fun, but none so much as their teacher.

The group started meeting in the living room of one of its members. They eventually outgrew that space, and on the baths of its non-commercial nature, they are now permitted to use a room in Crossett's Municipal Building (which is air-conditioned!!!).

Each Friday morning they come in a back door, past the stairway that leads to the jail, and into the firemen's dormitory (there are no firemen housed there at present.) Even that big room is now filled to capacity, which has forced the group to remain no larger than 13.

They plan a show of their work in the fall. Meantime, they are beginning to prop their favorites about their homes, and some have even framed and hung a masterpiece or so.

We repeat — anyone who wants to can draw! And it is loads of fun!

Green lumber is better than seasoned lumber in making forms for concrete work. Well - dried lumberdraws in moisture from the concrete and will be subject to warping. Asiatic Flu Is Dying Out

TOKYO, June 29 (UP)— An influenza epidemic which affected millions of Asians, killing more than 2,000 of them in the last eight months, appears to be dying out in the Orient, medical authorities said today.

But they warned it could recur again late this year, possibly in a more severe form than the relatively mild virus that cut a swath from Red China and Japan to New Guinea and Indonesia.

Cases of the disease cropped up in the United States and Europe, but not in epidemic proportions.

The World Health Organization at Geneva, Switzerland, reported today that "outbreaks" of the disease have been reported in Hawaii and San Francisco.

OUTLANDISH REPORT FROM THE COLONIES

Minutes Of Freedom Meeting Revealed

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Five high government officials met secretly in a Philadelphia tavern the other night and reached a momentous decision which will influence the lives of us all for years to come.

Independence Hall will deny this but the five men framed a statement of colonial principles which, in effect, is a declaration of independence from England.

(Editor's Note: That American institution, the Fourth of July speech, would be a great deal livelier if modern orators had some "inside" information on how the Declaration of Independence came into being. The following is designed to remedy that lacuna in American history. The report is completely fictitious—but it would have made great copy.)

At that secret meeting were Thomas Jefferson, the radical; John Adams, the reactionary; elder statesman Benjamin Franklin; Roger Sherman, an egghead from Yale; and Robert Livingston the Madison Avenue lawyer.

Although these public officials went to great pains to keep their meeting from the public, this columnist can now reveal what went on behind the scenes in that snuff-filled room.

"Ace we all here?" asked Jefferson as the innkeeper placed five foaming flagons of ale on the table.

"All except George," said Adams.

"Is he out of town again?" Sherman was disgusted.

"He had to go to court today," explained Adams. "That cherry tree rap. He's still appealing it. He'll never learn."

"Experience keeps a dear school yet fools will learn in no other," said Sherman.

Franklin began taking notes.

"What are you doing?" Sherman inquired.

"Nothing," said Ben innocently.

"So help me, Franklin," said Sherman, "if you lift another one of my sayings for your almanac, I'll . . . I'll . . ."

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," said Jefferson, "No arguments, please. Remember, we're here on serious business. We're here to write a declaration of independence for these colonies.

"Now, we've got a terrific beginning and a socko ending. All we need is a few lines to tie them together. Ideas, anyones?"

A side door opened and a man poked his head out.

"Another ale, please," he said.

"Yes, Mr. Hancock," said the innkeeper.

"What are you doing in there, John?" asked Livingston.

"Practicing my signature," said Hancock. "You fellows better hurry up. I'm getting writers' cramp."

"Well, stay with it, John," said Livingston. "Only a few more lines to go."

"Yes," said Adams, "and we've got to get together on this."

"We must all hang together, else we shall all hang separately," said Sherman and everyone chuckled except Franklin, who was busy taking notes.

"What are you doing?" asked Sherman.

"Nothing," said Ben.

"Now, look here, Franklin . . ."

"Knock it off," commanded Adams. "This is . . ."

"I've got it, I've got it," interrupted Jefferson, leaping to his feet. "Listen to this:

"Four score and seven years ago . . ."

"Just a minute," said Adams. "What happened four score and seven years ago?"

"I don't know," said Jeffserson.

"I do," said Livingston. "That was the year George birdied the 18th hole at Burning Tree."

"What's that got to do with our declaration?" asked Adams.

"Nothing," said Jefferson. "I

"The early bird catches the worm," said Sherman.

He looked at Franklin.

"Nothing," said Ben.

The side door opened and Hancock looked out.

"Another ale, please," he said.

"How's the signature coming?" asked Adams.

"A little wobbly," answered Hancock, "and the longer you guys take, the wobblier it gets. Thank you, innkeeper."

"We might as well have some more, too," said Jefferson.

"I think you've had enough," said the innkeeper.

"Enough? We're still standing. How about that fellow over there?" Jefferson indicated a comrade who had fallen in the corner. "We demand equal rights with him."

"He's my brother - in - law," explained the innkeeper.

"Now just a dad - blamed minute," shouted Jefferson, rising in his wrath. "Just you listen here to me.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal . . ."

Franklin began scribbling furiously on a sheet of foolscap.

"Get this," whispered Adams. "Write this down."

"What do you think I'm writing phone numbers?" snarled Ben.

". . . That they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and an occasional flagon . . ."

"We may have to edit this a bit, whispered Adams.

"Later, later," said Franklin impatiently.

". . . That to secure these rights . . ."

This columnist need not reveal any more. The entire declaration will be made public when it comes up for adoption by congress next July 4.

Supreme Court Loses Respect

It is a national tragedy that the Supreme Court of the United States should have reached its present state of decadence in the eyes of the public. It presages a breakdown in law and order that could result in tragic consequences for our form of government.

That the Supreme Court has lost the respect of the public is quite evident to anyone who has his eyes open. Neither is this loss of respect confined to any one region of the country — which might be explained by a special condition; it is spread nationwide.

If this attitude were that of the general public alone, it might be said that the people generally are simply not enough informed in matters of law to understand the actions of the Court. But the deplorable fact is that this loss of respect is evidenced most vigorously by those who do undestand matters of law—by outstanding practitioners of law, by justices of state supreme courts, by members of Congress. The severe denunciations of the Supreme Court by individuals of this type can not be passed off lightly.

What has caused the Supreme Court of the United States to enter this period of decadence in the eyes of the public? It is nothing more nor less than this loss of public respect — because it is only this respect for the Supreme Court on the part of the people that even gave it any power or any authority in the first place.

When our form of government was established for us by our forefathers, it was set up under three main headings — executive, legislative and judiciary—each with checks and balances on the other. From the very first, the judiciary was recognized as the weakest of the three branches; in fact, it had no power at all except that gained for it by the respect of the people. Such power is extremely great while it lasts; when this respect is gone there is nothing left.

Alexander Hamilton, writing in the Federalist, recognized this situation, when he said:

"The executive not only dispenses the honours, but holds the sword of the community; the legislature not only commands the purse, but prescribes the rules by which the duties and rights of every citizen are to be regulated: the judiciary, on the contrary, has no influence over either the sword or the purse; no direction either of the strength or of the wealth of the society; and can take no active resolution whatever. It may truly be said to have neither FORCE nor WILL, but merely judgement; and must ultimately depend upon the aid of the executive arm for the efficacious exercise even of this faculty.

"This simple view of the matter suggests several important consequences: it proves incontestibly, that the judiciary is, beyond comparison, the weakest of the three departments of power; that it can never attack with success either of the other two; and that all possible care is requisite to enable it to defend itself against their attacks. It equally proves, that, though individual oppression may now and then proceed from the courts of justice, the general liberty of the people can never be endangered from that quarter I mean so long as the judiciary remains truly distinct from both the legislative and executive. . . It proves, in the last place, that liberty can have nothing to fear from the judiciary alone, but would have every thing to fear from its union with either of the other departments. . . "

Andrew Jackson pointedly showed up the powerlessness of the Supreme Court while he was president by commenting something to the effect that, "The Supreme Court has handed down its decision; now let them enforce it," which of course the Court could not do without the cooperation of the executive. But there is nothing more powerful than public opinion, and so long as the Court had the respect and confidence of the people, which it had — almost reverently — until the last quarter century, then that very force made the Court powerful and its opinions almost sacrosanct in the minds of the people. All during these years the Supreme Court depend upon good judgement, which, as Alexander Hamilton pointed out, was the only faculty of its own that it had to depend on.

But the important aspect of the judiciary to the people, as pointed out by Hamilton, is that "the general liberty of the people can never be endangered from that quarter . . so long as the judiciary remains truly distinct from both the legislature and executive."

What has happened during the last quarter century bears out the truth of Hamilton's further statement that "liberty can have nothing to fear from the judiciary alone, but would have every thing to fear from its union with either of the other departments. . ." — because during this period there has been a self-evident union between the executive and the judiciary.

This started with the attempt to "pack" the Court, which failed at the time but later succeeded by replacements anyway, and which misalliance has continued down to the present day. None of the decisions handed down during these years—decisions which have lost for the Court the respect of the people — could have been, or can be, made effective without the connivance of the executive.

Neither the executive nor the judiciary has the authority to legislate, but when the judiciary usurps the power of the legislature and the executive proceeds to use its power to put such legislative decisions into effect, then it can only be assumed that the executive and the judiciary are in full agreement in relation thereto.

The ends desired by the executive and the judiciary may have been, or may be, attained thereby, but the process used bids fair to throw our government into a veritable state of anarchy if it is not stopped.

Flying Horseless Carriages Near

Flying horseless carriages, not much different from the present modern-day automobiles, except that they will roll along on four concealed fans, instead of wheels, will be in general use in this country within 10 years.

This will be pointed out in a widely circulated mechanics magazine in its July issue.

The new private flying sedan will have no propellers, no jets and no rotors and is expected to sell at a price about that of present-day fine automobiles.

Conceivably, these flying autos could travel along highways virtually at ground level and if the driver desired to pass a slow car in front of him he would merely rise a little higher and go above it, instead of passing on its left side. There would be no need, however, for following highways or roads except when the occupants of the auto wished to approach a stopping place. This could be anywhere along the side of a street that an ordinary automobile could stop or park.

The autos will be able to travel any distance above the ground, from a few feet to high into the air. They will have practically every advantage of the automobile and of the small airplane or helicopter, without most of the disadvantages of the flying machine.

This machine will resemble an automobile but will rest on short stilts. In place of wheels are four so-called "duct fans," the lifting mechanisms of the flying platforms. The fans push the auto up by forcing air downward through the ducts. These machines can be operated close to buildings, with no bad air-pocket results.

Why Bother Baseball?

A House committee is trying to ascertain whether baseball is a business or a sport and what to do about it. No more momentously trivial question has been asked since medieval scholars worried about how many angels could stand on the point of a pin.

Perhaps the best definition of organized baseball is that it is largely a business to those who play it and largely a sport to those who invest in it. The answer to what Congress should do about it is simpler: Nothing.

To bring the major leagues under anti-trust regulation on the theory that here is another free enterprise that would profit by unrestricted competition is absurd on the face of it.

Actually, the case for leaving well enough alone rests securely on the absence of any need for a change. Who is injured by the present immunity of organized baseball from the anti-trust laws? Few enterprises compete more vigorously for customers.

Few "monopolies" have livelier rivalry for the consumer's dollar. Few big businesses take smaller profits at greater risks.

Southern Trade Of Hell's Canyon Votes May Beat Civil Rights Bill

WASHINGTON — A half dozen Southern Senators, when they switched their votes on the controversial Hell's Canyon hydro-electric dam project in far - off Idaho ten days ago, may have succeeded in killing the Eisenhower administration's civil rights bill during this session of Congress, at least.

No one involved in the so-called "deal" between the Southern Senators and the public-power bloc of northern Democrats on the vote to authorize the government - financed high dam at Hell's Canyon in lieu of the privately financed three small dams on the Snake River, will admit that any trade of votes was made.

Nevertheless, all the evidence points to a trade, which up to this time has chiefly benefited the public power Senators. As a result, there is reason to believe that when a showdown comes on the civil rights bill, whether on the motion to invoke cloture, shutting off the certain filibuster on the House-approved measure, or adoption of the amendment requiring jury trials for persons alleged to have violated the proposed law, the Southern Senators will get some repayment.

Six northern Democratic Senators, all classified as liberals and supporting civil rights legislation, joined Southern Democrats in their unsuccessful fights against sending the House - approved civil rights bill directly to the Senate calendar, rather than to the judiciary committee, where it normally would have gone.

Two days later, five Southern Democratice Senators, who had previously voted against the federal dam at Hell's Canyon, reversed their vote and gave the measure the necessary majority for passage. Another, who had opposed the projects in the past, did not vote.

The six northerners who voted with the southerners in the attempt to send the civil rights bill to committee were Senator Kennedy of Mass.; Magnuson of Washington; Murray and Mansfield of Montana; Morse of Oregon and O'Mahoney of Wyoming.

Southern Senators who switched their votes on Hell's Canyon were Eastland of Miss.; Erwin of North Carolina; Long of Louisiana; Russel of Georgia; and Smathers of Florida. Senator Holland of Florida, who had earlier opposed the project, did not vote. The measure carried by an unexpected majority of 45 to 38.

Shortly after the two votes were taken, public charges were hurled that a deal had been made. But if the "Deal" involved only the voting by the northern Democrats to send the civil rights bill to committee, the Southerners would have gotten the short-end, since the six northern Democratic votes they obtained were still far short of the number needed to win the fight.

As a result, there is wide belief here, though unconfirmed, that some of these public - power Democratic Senators will join with the southern bloc and some few others to vote against any move by the civil rights' group to halt the coming filibuster by invoking cloture, which would place a time limit on debate.

That a bloc of votes of this type will be needed to defeat the cloture amendment seems apparent. Leaders in the battle against the civil rights measure, as passed by the House, concede that they have a solid vote on which they can count of only about twenty members. On the cloture vote, they feel confident they will pick up several northern Republican and Democratic votes of members who feel strongly against limitation of Senate debate, regardless of the issue involved.

But even with these votes, they will almost certainly need a few more to prevent a required 64 majority in favor of the debate limitation motion. Those members whom they helped on the Hell's Canyon measure may well provide the needed votes.

Should the southerners fail in their battle against invoking of cloture, they might later gain some proposed amendment which would require jury trials in cases of alleged violators of injunctions issued under the terms of the civil rights measure.

This amendment, sponsored by both southern Democrats and some northern Republicans, was defeated in the House, but will be the major issue in the Senate if the Administration leaders succeed in breaking the filibuster. Should the Senate adopt the amendment, many members of both Houses believe that the House of Representatives would agree to it in conference.

Public Forum

West Monroe, La.

Editor, Morning World:

"Good sportsmanship" seems to me to require that some defense be made in behalf of Mayor Howard, of Monroe, on the matter of the interstate highway into and through the Twin Cities!!!

No doubt volumes could be written, either pro or con, on the matter of this proposed highway route! If Mayor Howard's actions . . . which many may consider ill - advised . . . have caused us to "pause and reflect", much good may be the eventual result.

The clouds of eminent domain are gathering . . . and the threat of irreparable injury to the least our property owning citizens, deserves a full study of all pertinent factors. We cannot turn a deaf ear to threatened local violations of constitutional rights any more than the national government can fail to heed the despairing cry of deserving 'Girards' the world over. Thes right of eminent domain is offset only by 'national interest' . . . perhaps important questions of 'national interest' are involved in the construction of Interstate highways into and through communities!

The fact is that ninety per cent of the residents of the involved areas on the south side of West Monroe are opposed to the irreparable damage they will suffer, and the consequent destruction or devaluation of their properties, and they consider the route into and through their homes and property as entirely unnecessary and unjustified! Further, no mention has been made of the adverse effect (should any be felt) the presently selected route will have on the many potential industrial sites, adjacent to the city and south and west of the proposed route. Little thought has been given to the amount of Ad valorem assessment which will be permanently removed from tax rolls — and not otherwise replaced — by the proposed route! Yes, volumes might be written; and while we of the south side of West Monroe (a bit neglected by our own elected representatives . . . sacrificed, perhaps, for some small practical gain in the matter of local street improvements) might, in the past, have differed in our voting habits from those once displayed by Mr. Howard — we do wish to thank him for having temporarily given pause to any hasty action on the part of our fine highway directors, or of the consulting engineering firm (Dr. E. Pavelo and Associates of New York) who have delegated to these competent engineers authority to proceed to construct this fine interstate highway

If, of course, the proposed route into and through the Twin Cities is the only route possible, little can be gained by our own position, and we should kneel and humbly permit the ruthless forces of progress to destroy our homes! There are several other 'ifs' to be considered, however: 'if' circuitous routes are better, cheaper, and lend equal solution to the problem of "through traffic" . . . there is reason to pause; 'if' real estate speculation is involved — and 'if' we are to find ourselves in the humorous position of watching 'Dirty Democrats' manipulate 'Righteous Republicans' into a position of promoting such a speculative venture, would it not be inappropriate for you to lend the influences of your great newspaper to the successful conclusion of such a speculation?

These are "iffy" statements, of course, and we do not insinuate that they are factual . . . but, regardless of how you may feel about the "Little Man in the Big Boots" . . . some measure of credit is due him for causing a thorough — and in no way harmful—(there being no pause in the construction of the interstate highway) — consideration of all factors involved in this problem!

WAYNE R. DEACCN,
Chairman South Side Citizens Committee.

To See Ourselves

GOD, help us to behold ourselves . . . Not by our brightest star . . . As we may seem to others now . . . But as we really are . . . Help us to analyze our worth . . . With thinking that is sound . . . And so be certain that we keep . . . Our feet upon the ground . . . And thereby never to forget . . . That all great deeds we do . . . And every claim we have to fame . . . Belong at last to You . . . There is no problem on this earth . . . That we could ever face . . . Or any dream that could come true . . . Without Your loving grace . . . So help us, God, to serve You well . . . And draw a little nearer . . . As humbly we appraise ourselves . . . When we look in a mirror.

Old-Style Lobbyist In Washington Is Obsolete

WASHINGTON, June 29 (CQ)—Lobbying has gone modern.

And Mr. Average Voter, who always has had the final say at the ballot box and never has been shy about writing his Congressman, is the ultimate weapon in this modern lobbying warfare.

The wide recognition of Mr. Average Voter's power had made the old - style lobbyist obsolete. The portrait of a fast - talking, cigar-chomping character pushing a Congressman in a corner long enough to buy his vote has been scrapped.

In his stead have come gluent lawers, ex-representatives and flannel - suited public relations men. They still use the face-to-face approach with Members of Congress, but their impact is directly proportional to the number of Mr. Average Voters they speak for.

With standing membership organizations such as the AFL-CIO, Clothespin Manufacturers of America, National Grange, National Small Business Men's Assn. or Wine Institute the membership is fixed. So is the legislative interest. As a result, the Congressman, both in his face - to - face talks and in the mail he receives regarding any of those organizations' interests, can evaluate the depth of the drive. And the views of these organizations and their opponents help him make an accurate judgment. Through their lobbying he learns both sides of the issue in detail.

Mass Drive

But modern lobbying has gone beyond the standard weapons of identificable membership rolls. It has developed into a mass recruiting drive for "volunteer" fighters. And if done right, Mr. Average Voter volunteers without really knowing he has been asked to do so.

The technical name for this new strategy is indirect lobbying. The recruiting posters are in the form of newspaper and magazine ads, radio and television spot announcements, literature through the mail by the ton, bright "fact" slips in with monthly bills, speeches at the civic clubs, free movies for the Young People's Church group, and a friendly call on an editor or other opinion molder by someone passionate about this complicated natural gas bill, or Federal aid for schools, or taxes or foreign aid.

If the recruiting posters are designed right, Mr. Average Voter will volunteer by writing his Congressman about a pending bill. He has been given a specially tailored set of facts on an issue and has come to the obvious conclusion. He then passes on that conclusion to his Congressman. It may be a plea to end the raw deal the natural gas industry is getting by voting for the pending bill. Or it may be a plea to vote against Federal aid for schools, or for reduced taxes on railroads or for less foreign aid.

The Congressman at the receiving end has no way of knowing whether the letter is a sincere conviction or a planted one — even if the letter is written on the back of a paper bag.

Take the natural gas bill to exempt independent producers from Federal regulation. In that fight, the gas and oil industry collected nearly $2 million from its ranks for this very type of opinion molding, or . . . "education campaign. The proponents of the bill formed themselves into the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee.

NGORC spent $1.7 million in its education drive to win over Mr. Average Voter to the desirability of the natural gas bill. It sent out about five million pieces of literature, fanned out oil industry executives across the country to mold public opinion, paid a public relations firm $85,160 to plan overall strategy — all to recruit Mr. Average Voter. Yet NGORC did not register as a lobby on the ground it was educating, not lobbying.

Public Realization

Leonard F. McCollum, NGORC chairman, told the Senators: "One of the purposes (of NGORC) was to inform the public and . . . out of that they would realize the harmful effects of excessive Federal regulation (of natural gas production), and if the public realized that, we are convinced necessary (legislative) action (eliminating this control) will take place."

Ironically, it was a $2,500 campaign contribution offer — not a million dollar expenditure — during that campaign that touched off a broad lobby investigation by a special Senate committee headed by John L. McClellan (D Ark.). The Senators reported they could not find any evidence of the "arrogant" lobbying techniques that President Eisenhower said caused him to veto the natural gas bill. But they found many instances of the type of indirect lobbying carried on by NGORC.

This led them to recommend a new law to require practitioners of modern lobbying techniques to disclose their activities so Congress would be able to evaluate mail and other inspired pressures for a particular bill.

Right now, the only lobby regulations are in the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act. It is so vague that it can be evaded and doesn't even attempt to cover indirect lobbying. McClellan's bill does.

The McClellan bill is before his Government Operations Committee. The bill would apply to anybody who asked more than 1,000 persons to write their Congressma or who offered to pay for more than 25 such communications. It also would require anybody who spent more than $50,000 a year on an "education" campaign to tell the federal government where the money came from and where it went. Also, anybody who received $300 or more to testify on a pending bill before Congress, even though lobbying was not his regular work, would have to file lobby spending reports.

SYLVIA PORTER

Most Americans Like Their Jobs, Want To Keep Going

So, if you inherited a million dollars tomorrow, you would quit your job with that so-and-so, buy a yacht, take off for an indefinite trip around the world or just go fishing?

Or, if the fairy godmother waved her wand over you and gave you the chance to do it all over agin, you'd switch from what you are doing to some other line of work?

If your answer to either of these questions is, "You bet I would" you are in the small minority of employed men in our land.

For some peculiar reasons, a cherished belief among businessmen in our country is that most people would rather not work if they had an opportunity to choose between living comfortable with or without a job. For the same or other peculiar reasons, the general impression is that only a lucky few of us really like the work we do and wouldn't shift to other fields even if given the chance.

Yet, both common conceptions are complete misconceptions, according to a just - released nationwide study on the meaning of work by the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center. Among the provocative and significant points emphasized by the study are:

Even if they inherited enough moneyy to live comfortable without a job, four out of five employed American men would want to keep on working:

More than two - thirds of the nation's farmers and better than three - fifths of those in middle-class occupations would stay in their present type of work.

About two - thirds of all those who say they would keep on working even if they didn't have to cite positive reasons why they like having a job — for instance, keeping occupied and interested, keeping individually healthy and enjoying the kind of work they do;

Of the balance who give negative reasons for wanting to keep on working, most say simply they'd "feel lost or go crazy" without work.

Among different classes of employes, only the unskilled show any major difference in their desire to stay on the job — for almost half of the unskilled say they would quit work if they didn't have to earn a living;

Many in middle - class occupations — particularly professionals, managers employed by others and sales personnel — make it clear that having a job means a great deal more than just making a living.

Even had this study never been made, I would have guessed precisely these results.

If you have ever seen the rapid degeneration of a person who retires without interests or have you ever looked at the eyes and mouths of those who have nothing but leisure, you would have guessed them too.

The social significance of this study is obvious. Its economic significance, though, warrants considerable analysis.

For the fact is that the retirement policies of most of America's corporations are based on the utterly mistaken notion that leisure is a full - time goal of our senior citizens. While more and more noise is being made about retirement problems and literature about retirement drips with pompous pieties, a pitifully small number of corporations are doing anything constructive about preparing workers for their retirement years by helping them to adjust in advance, to develop new skills, embrace rewarding hobbies. And pitifully little is being done at the local and community levels either.

FISCAL YEAR

U.S. To Open 'Clean Books' Next Monday

WASHINGTON, June 29 (UP)—The government opens clean books on a new fiscal year Monday. Even before it begins, a lot of Washington's fiscal new year resolutions quietly are being shelved.

The administration was resolved to expand public welfare spending, including a big program of federal aid for school construction. Now the prediction on Capitol Hill is against any such new spending projects.

Congressional Democrats were generally resolved to cut the new budget so sharply that they could justify an income tax cut. Now many admit that tax relief is out of the question and prospects are not bright for next year.

Republicans were committed to holding down federal spending enough to produce a big surplus in the year just ending and a bigger one next year, making possible a reduction in the national debt and in the high cost of interest on the debt.

But the treasury is closing the year with a surplus of about one billion dollars, several hundred million less than President Eisenhower had predicted, despite a whopping $5,500,000,000 increase in tax collections over the previous fiscal year.

Congressional experts now predict federal spending in the new year may soar three billion dollars above fiscal 1957, even if Congress makes cuts in Eisenhower's defense and foreign aid budgets.

The bidding:
North, 1 club; East, Pass; South, 1 spade; West, 2 hearts.
North, 2 spades; East, Pass; South, 4 spades; West, Pass.
North, Pass; East, Pass.
Opening lead: King of hearts.

Confidence in partner is one of the basic requirements for successful defense. The "chargetaker" who babies his partner and tends toward making all decisions for the partnership himself, is giving himself all the worst of it, even when he is faced by an inferior partner.

On the other hand, even when playing wtih a super - expert, one should leave nothing to chance, when the issue can be clarified. Even the champ is capable of an occasional bit of misjudgment. Observe how West applied this principle in the defense of today's hand.

North opened with one club, and South responded with one spade. West's overcall of two hearts was made in the hope that it might inhibit an eventual three no trump contract against which West felt there was no defense. North's free raise i open to question. Had West passed, a courtesy raise to two spades would not have been objectional. But when West entered the auction, a pass by North was to be preferred. South, of course, would have carried on the bidding.

West opened the king of hearts, which East overtook with the ace and returned the five. West won the trick with the nine and observed that if he continued with the queen, East might not realize that declarer was about to ruff, and would probably take a useless discard.

It is true that East might rise to the occasion and, playing partner for a six card suit, trump with the ten, in an effort to promote something for him. But West left nothing to chance. He returned the deuce of hearts, which brought home clearly to East the necessity for giving forth with his best. He did so with the ten of spades and when South overruffed with the king, West could not be prevented fom scoring with his jack f trumps. When the club finesse failed, declarer had to accept defeat.

Cruiser To Be Dismantled For Virginia Trip

CLARENDON, Ark., June 29—UP—Workers will take a little off the top and bottom to enable the land-stranded cabin cruiser to find a way out of Arkansas.

The expensive boat on a lowboy attached to a trailer has been stranded here for 10 days, with truck driver Gerard Wright of DeRuyter, N. Y., unable to budge out of town.

Wright says the factory is sending a man here to take off the top of the boat. Also, air will be let out of the tires. This will permit the cabin cruiser to clear an underpass and move over grade crossings.

As for the stranded Wright "Well, I eat, and I sleep in the boat, and every time the 'movie' show changes I go see it."

To Wright, Clarendon, population 2,500 is a big town.

"Where I live," he said "the population is 600."

Wright hopes to be on the road Monday to deliver the boat to an anxious owner in Virginia.

He was asked if he'll miss Clarendon.

"I'll remember it, that's for sure."

Audrey Sweeps Through North Into Canada

BUFFALO, N.Y., June 29 (UP)—Hurricane Audrey swept into Canada today after cutting a 1,500-mile path from the Louisiana coast to Lake Ontario.

The first hurricane of the season had lost some of its punch as it slashed through southern and midwestern states. But it whipped up rain, thunder, lightning and a few tornadoes that claimed new victims and smashed more property.

Nineteen deaths were reported in Audrey's wake north of Louisiana. After blasting its way into Canada, it took three lives in Canada. Five persons were killed in Alabama, Mississippi and North and South Carolina. Eight died in weather connected accidents in Illinois and Indiana. Three, including an air force jet pilot who crashed in the storm, died in the Buffalo area.

Audrey cut a wide swath as it roared north out of the Louisiana disaster area. New York City was sideswiped with harsh winds at Audrey's eastern edge. The western edge lashed as far west as New Mexico.

Jar Of Pennies Causes Quandary

How much is 10 and a half pounds of pennies worth? That was the question facing Monroe police yesterday morning, when W. W. Tanner, proprietor of Tanner's Grocery Store at 1804½ DeSiard street, reported that a jar full of pennies had been taken between 9 p.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Saturday.

Tanner said that he had weighed the jar a few days ago, but he didn't know how many pennies were in it. Capt. H. B. Jonrson called the Monroe postoffice, and found out how much one pound of pennies is worth. He then computed it against 10½ pounds, and police are now investigating the case of a thief with approximately $16 worth of pennies, who entered the store through a window and disturbed nothing else.

TROUBLESOME, BUT . . .

Customs Fascinating Myster To Traveler

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

GORAGHWOOD, Ireland (AP)—The customs of a country never fail to fascinate the traveler.

By customs I mean not the quaintly dressed natives who can't wait for the tourist season to end to slip back into their regular duds, but that dedicated band of civil servants who spend their waking hours rummaging through other people's luggage.

A well trained customs man can make even the most carefully packed suitcase look like a recently loaded washing machine with just a flick of the wrists. The trick seems to be to dip deep and remove the hands with a scattering motion, like a politicial bent over a raffle barrel.

What are they looking for?

After traveling for several weeks in climes no stranger than Paris, Dublin, Belfast, Montreal and New York, this weary wayfarer never did find out.

The agent may chatter amiably about perfume, cameras and Swiss watches, but all the while you get the impression that what he is really after is a couple of dozen stogies of hand wrapped marijuana, a deadly bushmaster snake or the remains of a glass telephone kiosk recently reported missing from a British railway station in Lake country.

The questions add to the aura of mystery that surrounds the whole proceedings.

"Have you any butter?" demanded a Northern Ireland customs official who came aboard the Dublin-Belfast express at this little border town. It was a blazing day, insufferably hot in the crowded second class carriage, but he was in dead earnest. After a most meticulous search, under and over the seat, through the luggage, even a peek into the wash room, he went away disappointed.

And so did I. It would have been interesting to observe the condition of the contraband when finally discovered in somebody's hatband or wherever it is that butter bootleggers conceal their loot from the authorities.

In Paris, four agents gathered in solemn conclave about a plastic squeeze bottle found in my toilet kit.

"Shaving lotion," I said, smiling thinly.

They dropped their voices to a conspiratorial whisper. Finally, one bold fellow stepped forward, undid the cap and cautiously squirted a few drops onto the counter.

"For the face . . . le kisser," I improvised, patting my cheeks like the man in the television commercial. The agent got the idea and did likewise.

"Tres sexy," he said, applying another generous dab before rewarding my luggage with his little chalk mark.

The comely girl next to me, an airline stewardess, had even more to write home about when a skimpy summer nightgown caught the twinkling eye of the inspector. Lifting it on high, he laughed roguishly and called its seductive qualities to the attention of his comrades.

"You ze 'uzband?" he asked, turning suddenly to me.

"No."

"Ze boy friend?"

"No."

"Ah," hes sighed, "c'est la vie." The others sighed too. Their sympathetic sighs were a high point in my tour.

The American customs agents, depending on whom you get, seem to follow two separate approaches, the tactical and the strategic. The tactical man will insist on a systematic search of each and every item of luggage before turning you over to the next station—usually the nurse who distrusts your vaccination and tries to elicit an admission that it was done with a ballpoint pen while waiting on line.

The strategic man, on the other hand, selects only one item, usually the most unobtrusive, such as a typewriter or bag of sandwiches, and gives it his complete, undivided and unbelieving attention. The slow, deliberate, suspicious manner in which he performs this spot check is designed to intimidate you into suddenly ripping open your shoulder padding and showing where the diamonds or automobile tires are hidden.

The Irish, especially, have had amazing results with this method.

The story is told of an old crone who tightly clutched a long bottle beneath her shawl while passing from predominantly Roman Catholic south Ireland to predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland.

"What have you in the bottle?" asked the Ulster agent.

"Just a bit of holy water," she said piously.

"Let me see it." The agent sniffed the contents and almost lost his breath.

"This is whisky," he sputtered.

The sleek new Corvette—and Chevrolet Bel Air Convertible

Every Chevy is a Corvette at heart!

. . . because every Chevrolet shares Corvette's sports car steering, its quicksilver responsiveness, its ready-for-anything roadability.

In plain fact, a Chevy does give you an unseen bonus you don't get in other cars. It's the built-in stability, the accurate handling, the geared-to-the-road security that derive from our experience building America's only true sports car.

This doesn't show in the showroom, of course. But you can feel it the minute you wheel a Chevy out on the road. There's an extra sense of confidence that comes from its beautifully balanced weight distribution, a new relaxation that stems from its precise, instant response to steering, brakes and throttle.

This is a real bonus—you don't have to give up anything to get it. Take it away and Chevy would still be ahead of the field in ultra-efficient engine design, in the craftsmanship of Body by Fisher, in the quiet good taste of styling, in the velvet hush of its ride and the solidity of its construction. But you can't separate that Corvette feeling from any Chevrolet—it's built in. Try one and see!

Irish Welcome Is Warm But No Bridges For Sale

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

DUBLIN, Ireland, June 29 (AP)—When the first big wave of American tourists sweeps into Ireland this summer, they are sure to be accorded a warmer reception than the mainstream of Irish tourists received at our shores 100 years ago.

No one will try to sell them O'Connell Bridge, Nelson's Pillar or a half interest in a Wicklow shillelagh factory. No one will return the old Tammany greeting of a century ago by asking them to join Fianna Fail or the I. R. A. or present a letter from Lord Mayor Briscoe to get a lodging for the night.

And, unless they go round recklessly humming "My Country Tis of Thee," which has the same tune as the British national anthem, "God Save Our Noble Queen," they can stay for days, months, even years without having their skulls creased by an aforementioned shilleleagh, which weapon, said to say, has become exceedingly rare.

So rare in fact, it is now made only for the tourist trade, not for hand to head combat.

The plain fact of the matter is that Americans are popular in Ireland, perhaps more genuinely popular than anywhere else in Europe or the rest of the world. They speak almost the same language, dress in a reasonably similar fashion—sports shirts, sun glasses and cameras excepted — and have a common interest in such tweedy pastimes as hunting, fishing and horseracing.

Because of our two successful donnybrooks with England in the early days of the Republic, the Irish tend to look upon us as brothers under the skin, co-revolutionaries in the same grand and glorious cause.

Geographical ties, in many cases, are even closer. The Irish can be pardoned if they sometimes look upon the United States as a thriving suburb of Dublin. Two centuries of emigration have resulted in our having more people of Irish descent than Ireland itself. You'll travel a good many miles before encountering someone who does not have a brother or a nephew or a cousin in New York, Boston, Philadelphia or any of dozens of other cities from Maine to California where the Irish settled in large numbers.

"Ah, so you're from Boston," you are liable to be asked. "Then you must know Tim Flaherty's boy, Cornelius. A grand lad. Left here 35 years ago. They say he's a big man out there. In the dray-man's business, so I'm told."

If you should, by any chance, happen to known Cornelius, all Ireland will be at your feet, like a huge green carpet of welcome.

If not, you'll still be treated in a manner that may surprise but seldom embarrass you. The Irish are relatively new at this tourist business and as yet have not become tip happy. They are beakward nation to the extent that no one has got around to telling them that the main purpose of tourism is to see how quickly and how cleanly the American visitor can be separated from his coveted dollars.

You'll find the people for the most part scrupulously honest, fiercely proud and independent, amazingly adroit in speech and humor, conservative in dress particularly where women are concerned, and deeply religious.

Contrary to popular opinion, drinking is not the main sport. Everywhere you go you'll encounter men and women of all ages wearing the little red and white button that proclaims them to be "pioneers," total abstainers from all alcoholic beverages. On the other hand, the thirsty tourist will be glad to know that the distilleries and breweries have not yet been put on a stand-by basis.

Prices on most items are rock bottom. A room in the best hotel or at the finest resort will cost you less than $5 a night, which includes breakfast. Green fees on a championship golf course will be under $1, so will a good meal at all but the fanciest restaurants.

But the best thing in Ireland is free — its stupendous scenery of mountains and moors and rolling farmland, centuries old Danish towers, Norman castles and Irish monasteries; neat white cottages with thatched roofs, sparkling lakes and mountain streams to lure the trout and salmon fishermen, quaint cities with winding streets and elegant Georgian buildings; the sight of a tinker's caravan on the road or the brightly polished brass knobs in the corner pub; a pasture deep with shamrocks and a limestone wall climbing over a hill aflame with yellow gorse blossoms and white hawthron bushes.

Even the natives have not grown tired of living on a picture postcard. An American tourist learned this when he was asked by a Galway shepherd why he was driving his flock to the summit of a particularly barren crag.

Judge Reaffirms One Conviction Against Miller

WASHINGTON, June 29 (UP)—A federal judge yesterday reaffirmed one of his May 31 congressional contempt convictions against playwright Arthur Miller. But he threw out the other on grounds it conflicted with a recent Supreme Court ruling.

Judge Charles F. McLaughlin's decision left Miller, husband of actress Marilyn Monroe, still faced with a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine. His attorneys announced they would appeal to higher courts.

McLaughlin originally convicted Miller May 31 on two counts for refusing to answer questions by a House subcommittee on un-American activities. Miller asked that his conviction be set aside on the basis of the Supreme Court's June 17 decision in the Watkins case.

The high court reversed the contempt conviction of Illinois labor leader John T. Watkins who, like Miller, refused on grounds of conscience to name persons he had seen at Communist meetings. Both Miller and Watkins freely answered questions about themselves.

U. S. Loser When Skilled Men Quit

By STANLEY MEISLER

BARKSDALE AIR FORCE BASE, La. (AP)—Jim Hickok, fresh out of high school, joined the air force four years ago. He planned to make it a career. Now, he's quitting.

Rodnie Cann, with a year of college and some time as a mechanic behind him, joined the air force at the same time for one enlistment only. Now, he's staying.

The sharp difference between Jim and Rodnie illustrates one of the toughest problems faced by the United States armed forces. It is not a problem of science, politics, weapons, or strategy. It's a problem of men. The armed services cannot hold on to the men they train.

Both Jim and Rodnie belong to the Strategic Air Command. The air force spent almost $75,000 to train each man. Yet neither was of much help until his fourth year.

The United States will get a return on its investment in Rodnie, but the money spent training Jim is almost all wasted. And there are more men like Jim leaving the air force than there are men like Rodnie staying. Why?

Part of the answer is pay.

Money did not seem too important to Jim when he graduated from high school in Adrian, Mich. at 18. But now he is married. A child is expected. As an airman first class, he brings home $230 a month, including food allowances and his wife's allotment.

Retirement Unimpressive

"If that was $300 a month I might stay," says Jim. Retirement pay in 16 years is too far away to impress him.

Rodnie did not rush into the air force. First there was a year at Howard Payne College, then a few years as a mechanic in Brownwood, Tex. When he joined, Rodnie was 22.

In three years he stepped up to staff sergeant. Now he takes home $290 a month to his wife, Helen, and their daughter, Kathy.

At 26, his retirement age of 42 does not seem too distant. The small monthly pension of the future outweighs, in his mind, the offers of higher pay he now receives from civilian organizations.

There is another problem, harder to see than dollar bills — the question of adjustment. Military life is different from civilian life. Some men don't get used to it.

Assignment Complaints

"I wanted to be a machinist. So they put me in electronics," complains Jim, who is not a chronic griper. "I'm from the north. I wanted to be near home, in Dayton or Columbus, Ohio. I never heard of Shreveport before they assigned me to Barksdale."

Rodnie also is regimented and the air force can shift his station without warning. But he and his wife have accepted the inconvenience.

The defense department is fully aware of this personnel problem. After a year of study, a committee headed by Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric, recently recommended a sweeping new pay program with bigger salaries and bonuses for skilled technicians.

Cordiner figures the plan by 1962 would save the government five billion dollars a year — the sum it now spends training replacements.

But faced with a tough budget fight, the administration has decided to scrap the Cordiner plan, at least for now.

Seixas, Flam Win In Wimbledon Net

By ROBERT MUSEL

WIMBLEDON, England, June 29 (UP)—Vic Seixas, seeking his second Wimbledon title, and Herb Flam, trying for his first big crown in 10 years of top-flight tennis, advanced to the quarterfinals of the Wimbledon championships today in sweltering heat.

They were the only Americans in the round-of-eight, which also included the tour top-ranked Australians—defending champion Lew Hoad, second-seeded Ashley Cooper, fifth-seeded Neale Fraser, who beat 1950 champion Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Paris today, and eighth-seeded Mervyn Rose.

In the women's division, Dorothy Head Knode and Betty Rosenquest Pratt won fourth-round matches today to join three other American girls—top-seeded Althea Gibson, four - time champion Louise Brough and Darlene Hard—in the quarterfinals.

Seixas, 1953 champ at Wimbledon and '54 champ at Forest Hills, used his experience to beat slim Mal Anderson of Australia, 4-6, Mal Anderson of Australia, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Flam, the 28-year-old from Beverly Hills, Calif., played his usual steady retrieving game to beat British Davis Cupper Billy Knight 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

Patty, 33-year-old internationalist who has more style than stamina, gave left-handed Fraser, 23, a bitter battle before succumbing, 6-3, 6-4, 10-12, 6-4.

Hoad, favored to win his second straight Wimbledon title, had an easy time with his countryman, Roy Emerson, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. The final place in the quarterfinals was taken by Sven Davison of Sweden when he beat Bob Wilson of Britain, 3-6 6-1, 8-6, 6-4.

Mrs. Knode, the veteran from Forest Hills, N.Y., eliminated Pauline Edwards of Britain, 6-3, 6-3, and Mrs. Pratt defeated Ruia Morrison of New Zealand, 6-4 11-9.

Turia Claims Fat Delaware Park Stakes

STANTON, Del., June 29 (AP) — The Calumet farm of Kentucky made off with another big one today when Bill Hartack botted home Princess Turia the winner of the world's richest races for fillies and mares — the $164,625 Delaware Handicap.

Princess Turia, who won the $51,425 New Castle Handicap last Saturday, second of Delaware Park's distaff big three, caught the pacesetting Pucker Up with a bit more than a sixteenth of a mile to travel, and pulled away to a half length victory.

Pucker Up was a length ahead of the Ellis Farm's Little Pache, who got third money by a neck over George D. Widener's Rare Treat in the field of 19.

Princess Turia, a chestnut 4-year - old daughter of Helipolis-Blue Delight, paid $9.80, $4.60 and $3.60, and packed 119 pounds while Pucker Up, with 117, returned $5.20 and $4.80. Little Pache, with 119 pounds, was $13.40 to show.

Ford In Command Of Western Open

DETROIT, June 29 (AP) — Masters Champion Doug Ford barreled into a one - stroke lead in the $25,000 Western Open Golf Tournament today, firing a four under par 67 for a 207 total as two - time champion Sam Snead bolted from out of nowhere into a contending position.

The 34-year -old Ford, leading money winner on the tour, was one of only five professionals who could break 35-36—71 par in today's third round at Plum Hollow Golf Club.

Just one stroke behind the burley Mahopac, New York, swinger, were Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla.; Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill.; Gay Brewer Jr. of Cincinnati, and Gene Littler of Singing Hills, Calif.

The veteran Snead, who at 45 is proving that he is far from washed up, had the finest performance in the third round of this 72-hole event. The West Virginia slammer was 6 under - par with a 33-32—65 and moved into a tie with Paul Harney of Bolton, Mass., and Ken Venturi of San Francisco, each with 209 —Just two strokes behind Ford.

It was a stirring comeback for Snead, Western Open winner in 1949 and 1950. He had a 75 on opening day when he took 10 strokes on a par - 4 hole. Yesterday Snead's 69 was barely enough to quolify him ior the final 36 holes.

Baxter Takes College Golf Title,4 And 2

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 29 (AP) — Coming from behind, Red Baxter Jr., of Houston University today defeated Ward Wettlaufer of Hamilton College, 4 and 2, for the 60th annual N.C.A.A. Golf Tournament championship.

Wettlaufer, of Buffalo, N. Y., was one up at the end of the first 18 holes and went 2 - up with a birdie 4 on the 21st.

On the next hole Baxter found the touch that won him the Trans-Mississippi title at Houston last week. He took the 22nd, 23rd and 24th with a par and two birdies. A 13 - foot, downhill putt on the 24th sent him ahead. He never was behind again.

After three weeks of almost continuous golf, Baxter said "I'm not going to touch a club for three weeks."

Pung Disqualified; Miss Rawls Wins

By STEVE SNIDER
United Press Sports Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y., June 29 (UP)—Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., a 29-year-old pro who learned her golf in Texas, won the Women's Open Golf Championship for the third time today when the Hawaiian-born Jackie Pung of San Francisco was disqualified for posting the wrong score after accepting congratulations as the apparent winner.

Forty-five minutes after Jackie finished her wind-lashed rounds of 73-72 for a total of 298, executive secretary Joe Dey of the U.S. Golf Association ruled she and Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., both had been disqualified for signing scorecards giving each a five on the par-four fourth hole.

Both, said Dey, had sixes. Ironically Jackie said she "thought" she had a six on the fourth hole but inadvertently signed a card recording five for that hole. Even the six would have given her the title with an official 298.

Miss Rawls, winner in 1951 and again in 1953 when she defeated Jackie in a playoff at Rochester, N.Y., led by three shots after a morning round of 75. She fought the high winds for a 76 in the afternoon for a 72 hole total of 299.

"It's always great to win, I guess," she said, "but I sure hate to do it this way. I feel sorry for Jackie. I know how I would have felt if it had happened to me."

Mrs. Pung, mother of two teen-aged daughters, came out of the hearing room with tears streaming down her face. One daughter, 15-year-old Barnette, tried to comfort her mother.

The USGA unanimously adopted the disqualifcation rule for a wrong score last year after the men's U.S. open. In that tournament, Jackie Burke and Gil Cavanaugh were penalized two strokes for a wrong score after a special ruling by the USGA.

Patty Berg of St. Andrews, Ill., with a 73-75 for 305 finished second with 305. Betty Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., and Ladies PGA champion Louise Suggs of Sea Island, Ga., tied for third at 308. Miss Hicks had 76-80 and Miss Suggs 75-76 on the final two rounds.

NON-TITLE MATCH

Hurley Wrestles O'Hara At Arena

Frank Hurley, after retaining his Louisiana heavyweight championship in three close matches with George Curtis, has decided to put his title belt away for a little while and wrestle awhile for fun — and cash.

The Australian meets Pat O'Hara in the main event at Kallio's Arena tomorrow night — but not for the title. The bout will have a 90-minute time limit with 2 falls needed to win.

If the "Fighting Irishman" from St. Petersburg, Fla., makes a good showing tomorrow night, Hurley has said he'll give him a chance for the championship. In his first appearance here last week, O'Hara teamed with Jack Curtis to beat Jack Dillon and Phil Brummett.

Monday night's semi-final affair will be another tag team match with Dillon and newcomer Jules LaRance, Montreal, Canada, facing Jack and George Curtis. If George is unable to wrestle, Bill Barney will take his place.

Charlie Krepp and Bill Roth are the stars of Coach Ralph Casey's University of North Carolina swimming team.

A Piece Of String Was Once A Ring

By ALTON HOWARD

I wonder if it has ever occurred to you that the origin of the ring was ascribed to the knot in conjunction with the supposed "magic" or binding virtues of a piece of string!

Well, that's what history tells us, adding that if a piece of string wasn't lying around, the use of a piece of wire was considered just as good. We all know, of course, about tieing a piece of a string around our finger so we won't forget something. But how about a piece of string as a wedding band? Wouldn't that be ridiculous?

From a plain round hoop of metal — which developed through the ages—to an elaborately chased gold ring or one set with one or more precious stones is quite a step in history. But that's what happened.

And today the jewelers' art revolves very largely around the designing and creation of rings both for men and women —and also for children. Every woman, at engagement time, cherishes her gift of a beautiful diamond ring from her husband-to-be. It is his most enduring token of love. It will remain with her forever.

Our display of rings, with emphasis on diamond rings, is outstanding. Priced from $50.00 to $5,000 you'll find exactly what you want—and on easy terms if you wish. Come in today. Howard Bros. Jewelers, 116 DeSiard.

Two Persons Rescued From Roof In Gulf

An ordeal of several hours of clinging to a rooftop floating in the gulf off Cameron, ended around 4 p.m. Friday for the relatives of a Monroe family, George Johnson, a member of the News-Star—World advertising staff was advised yesterday.

Johnson's aunt Mrs. G. J. Gauthier, and her 14-year-old daughter, Julie Anne, were caught up in the destructive forces of Hurricane Audrey when it swept through Cameron leveling or dislodging most structures in the area. Their home was destroyed and a rooftop where they took sanctuary kept them afloat for a number of terror-filled hours before a rescue boat arrived. Mrs. Gauthier's husband and older daughter were in Baton Rouge when the storm stuck.

Yesterday morning, Johnson's mother, Mrs. M. M. Johnson of Dick Taylor Street and his sister, Mrs. Aubry Jones of South Third, left for Lake Charles to visit Mrs. Gauthier in a hospital there where she was confined for treatment. Her condition was believed to be good. No medical treatment was required for the girl.

Canada Gives $50,000 For Relief

TORONTO, June 29 (AP) — The Canadian Red Cross announced today a cash gift of $50,000 to the American Red Cross to help cope with the devastation caused by Hurricane Audrey.

Marshall Stearns, chairman of the National Executive Committee, said the donation was regarded as an "interim" measure and the Canadian Red Cross was ready to make further contributions if the need became apparent.

Several Power Companies Form Research Group

Louisiana Power and Light Company, New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and 11 other independent electric companies in six states have joined to form the Southwest Atomic Energy Associates.

W. O. Turner, president of the Louisiana company, and George S. Dinwiddie, president of the New Orleans organization, said the Southwest Atomic Energy Associates are engaged in research and development "aimed at practical use of atomic energy as a supplemental fuel for the future electrical needs of the areas." States included are Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and Oklahoma.

The new non - profit corporation now has under consideration a $5 million program of research and development, extending over a four year period. The program will consist primarily of studies and tests pertaining to a new advanced reactor design believed to have important potential advances over other designs in heat efficiency and economic performance.

Formation of the Southwest Atomic Energy Associates is similar to action previously taken by other groups of independent electric companies.

The companies taking part in the program include Arkansas-Missouri Power Company, Arkansas Power & Light Company, Central Louisiana Electric Company, Inc., the Empire District Electric Company, Gulf States Utilities Company, Kansas Gas and Electric Company, Louisiana Power and Light Company, Missouri Public Service Company, New Orleans Public Service, Inc., Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, Public Service Company of Oklahoma and Southwestern Gas and Electric Company.

Peterson Says Repairs Left To Red Cross Funds

NEW ORLEANS, June 29 (AP) — Gen. Alfred Gruenther (Ret.) president of the American Red Cross, said it may take months to rehabilitate hurricane shattered southwest Louisiana.

Gruenther and other officials appointed by President Eisenhower to survey the wind and flood damage, paused here for a press conference before flying into the stricken area.

"We don't know the extent of the damage yet," Gruenther said.

Gruenther said the Red Cross had 65 workers in the area, mostly specialists.

Val Petersen, former chief of the Federal Civil Defense Agency (FDCA) said the rehabilitation operation is primarily a Red Cross responsibility.

"We are here to find out what we, as government, can do to assist the Red Cross. The Red Cross is the only agency of its type in American which can aid private citizens," Peterson said. "It can extend funds for private relief. The government cannot."

3 Negroes Here Stabbing Victims

Three Monroe Negroes were stabbing victims yesterday afternoon, between 3 and 3:30 p.m. but none of the mishaps were serious.

Taken to Conway Memorial hospital was Dorothy Webb, 31, of 1211 Olive street, who was stabbed one inch below the temple. Mose Van Buren, Negro, of 423 N. 12th street was arrested by police in connection with the case.

Police officers who investigated stated that she lost a considerable amount of blood. She was treated at the hospital and released.

The incident occurred in the 200 block of North 14th street. Within a few minutes after the Webb woman was cut, Mary Crumity on 14th street, between Adams and Washington streets, was stabbed. She was not seriously injured and did not require hospitalization. Van Buren was boked on aggravated battery charges in both cases.

His assailant was alleged to be Oliver Page, Negro, of 423 N. 12th street. Monroe police last night were investigating the incident.

First Six Months Of Business Ends With Many Contradictions, Paradoxes

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, June 29 (AP)—Winding up the first six months of 1957, the nation's business this week presented a study in paradoxes and contradictions.

The paradox—perhaps more apparent than real—was that costs and prices kept going up while money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from the nation's factories and farms in ever increasing abundance.

A case in point was the steel industry which—at a time of surplus production and lagging demand—ordered a 4 per cent boost in prices.

Steel Hikes

Even as announcement of the $6 a ton increase was being made in the carpeted offices of the steel companies, production in blast furnaces and open hearths was being slowed because of a decline in new orders.

Steelmakers said the price increase was made necessary by rising labor costs. U. S. Steel Corp. said its multimillion dollar payroll would jump 6 per cent July 1—the effective date for a new round of automatic pay increases. Since 1940, big steel said, its labor costs have climbed 250 per cent and prices of the goods and services it buys have zoomed 315 per cent.

The problem of rising costs and sagging sales was evident on other fronts this week. Turning to price increases as a cure were manufacturers of automobiles, appliances, aluminum, gasoline and heating oil.

Strange Inflation

It was this strange inflation, which seemed to lack the traditional causes of inflation, that had set the dominant tone for the economy during the first six months of 1957.

Some observers called it a "cost-push" inflation to distinguish it from the traditional inflation. In the usual, old-style type of inflation, prices are forced upward because people have lots of money and can get all the credit they want, while autos, houses and other consumer goods are hard to come by. In the first half of 1957 it was the other way around—goods were plentiful and credit scarce. Indications were the same situation would prevail during most if not all of the second.

All in all, it was a good first half. There were soft spots. Steel production, home building, freight carloadings, auto and appliance sales were below expectations, but heavy construction and retail sales were strong. The boom to be sure, was no longer climbing at last year's dizzy pace. But it was still climbing, and business activity as a whole moved slowly toward new peaks.

Cotton Moves To Higher Level

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures prices moved upward this week under the impetus of Washington developments and Hurricane Audrey. It was the fourth straight week of a rising market.

At their best of the week all deliveries made new life-of-contract highs. Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange chalked up net gains ranging from $1.00 to $3.20 a bale.

Buying was spurred by a combination of factors. One was a growing belief that the 1957 support price level would be well above earlier indications. Another was the fading possibility that Congress would adopt new price support legislation in time to affect the new crop.

Also on the bullish side were reports of possible damage to the new crop in areas of Louisiana and Texas which had been hit by the hurricane.

Offerings were furnished mainly through profit taking.

System For Pricing Of Oil Develops

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, June 29 (AP)—A new system for adjusting prices may be developing within the oil industry.

A half dozen companies have boosted products prices. Increased labor costs, at least in part, have been passed on to consumers almost at once.

The price hikes have been made despite some fears that inventories are too high. Gasoline price wars have been reported off and on in a number of communities in recent weeks.

In Line

The new price adjustments are in line with a change some operators, particularly among independents, have been seeking for months. They want the oil industry to follow the practice of other industries of boosting prices in proportion to increased costs as the higher expenditures develop.

Many operators contend that had such a policy been followed for crude prices the adverse reaction to a 25-cent per barrel increase in January, the first since 1953, would never have developed.

Sinclair, Continental, and Gulf are among the companies which have boosted wholesale prices of gasoline, kerosene and light fuel oils two-tenths of a cent a gallon and heavy fuel oils five cents a barrel.

"These higher prices are required to cover the higher cost, said Harry Kennedy, Continental vice president.

Gulf said its increases were "forced by recent increases in wages and other employe benefits."

A six per cent wage increase retroactive to May 1, has practically throughout the industry as a result of negotiations with the Oil Workers Union. Most companies increased salaries of nonunion employes before the union negotiations were completed.

Bulls Take Over Wheat

CHICAGO, June 29 (AP)—A bull market — the public investor's delight — is enlivening the wheat pit at the Board of Trade for the first time since early this year.

Wheat futures continued to climb, gaining 5⅝ to 7 cents for the week. The bread cereal now is up to 10 to 12 cents for the last three weeks. Other grains also were higher, with the excessive rainfall throughout the growing areas the main bullish influence.

New style wheat closed Friday 5⅝ to 7 cents higher than a week ago Friday. Corn was ½ to 2 cents higher, oats 1¾ up to ⅛ down, rye 1 to 2¼ higher, soybeans 2¾ to 4⅞ higher.

Cotton Workshop Draws Several Local Teachers

Northeast State was represented last week at a cotton workshop for teachers which was held at the Northeast Louisiana Experiment Station, Calhoun.

College students under leadership of L. L. Price, head of Northeast's Agriculture Department, and E. H. Allen, assistant professor, participated in the conference which was sponsored by the State Department of Education.

The program emphasized talks and demonstrations by specialists from the American Cotton Council, Louisiana Experiment Station, representatives of fertilizer and insecticide companies, teachers and students.

Discussions covered the range of research being conducted on cotton and accented the need of greater study. Speakers also gave emphasis to cotton defoliation, with its advantages and disadvantages, and control of insects and the comparable value of various kinds of cotton insecticides.

Practical aspects of the workshop included field practice of finding and identifying insects, making boll worm infestation counts, and determining the necessity of poisoning.

IMPORT STUDY

Oil State Congressmen Welcome Action By Ike

WASHINGTON, June 29 (AP)—Oilstate congressmen generally welcomed President Eisenhowers' call this week for a new study of oil imports. Some Democratic criticism was sounded to the action as "belated" and "delaying."

Sen. Kerr (D-Okla) said the President "still further postpones decision and action by appointing another cabinet committee to determine a fact which has too long been painfully apparent both to the President and every member of the committee h has appointed." I am glad that at long last he has done that much."

Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Who), calling for a "positive" program to control imports, expressed confidence the committee would make "a dilligent attempt" to solve the issue.

Rep. Steed (D-Okla) said he feared the study would amount to "another delaying tactic" but hoped he was wrong "and something would come out of it."

The President named a six-man cabinet committee, headed by Secretary of Commerce Weeks, to determine whether oil is being imported "in such quantities as to threaten to impair the national security." Under the tariffs laws, he has the power to curb imports if they endanger defense-essential industries in this country.

Sen. Carlson (R-Kan) commended the presidential action and called for an early report by the committee because, he said, the situation is "critical." He said early action to curtail imports is "imperative" and added that congress would have to act if effective executive steps are not taken.

SIX MONTHS STOCK REVIEW

Wide Swings And Dramatic News Highlight Exchanges

By ED MORSE

NEW YORK, June 29 (AP)—Wide swings and dramatic news highlighted the stock market in the first half of 1957 but on average the market ended about where it began the period.

For the week just ended the AP average made a minor gain of 80 cents above its close last week.

But between the high of $186.40 June 13 and the low of $168.00 Feb. 12 there was a spread in the average of $18.40. That left plenty of room for losses to be taken or profits to be made.

Saw Seasonal Trading

Back in January the most widely-held view in Wall Street was that prices would move up and down within a reasonable trading range in 1957. That consensus proved correct—for the first six months, anyway. A minority of bears, who looked for a sustained period of lower prices, was proved wrong—also for the first six months.

Economic, monetary and psychological factors which affect stock market prices had full play during the half year.

After some hesitation as 1957 began, the market started downward. There had been disappointment over the extent of the year-end rally. There was concern over further tightening of credit. There were some ragged spots in the economy.

Six months later similar factors existed. The question of high interest rates, tight money and inflation has now become camorous. It has caused considerable uncertainty in recent market sessions.

Keynote In January

The keynote of this sort of thing was sounded in January by Treasury Secretary Humphrey when he stated that continued high spending by government could lead to a "hair-curling depression." The Humphrey statement had little immediate impact on the market. But when former President Hoover said substantially the same thing about two weeks later it was another matter. Here the market demonstrated its psychological responsiveness, taking one of its steepest dives of the year.

Less than a week later the market suffered its worst loss of the year, crashing through the frequently-tested support levels of 1956. The decline was purely technical. But the market had flunked a major test.

Things Improve

Immediately after this shakeout, however, things improved. The withdrawal of Israeli forces from Egyptian territory signalled a prolonged upturn. Ever since last summer, the market had fretted about the Suez Canal. In April, when the canal was finally reopened, confidence was bolstered. An uninterrupted 12-week climb of stock prices was well under way.

In May, disarmament talks began to hurt aircrafts and other defense issues. Layoffs by some huge industrial firms dampened enthusiasm. Further hesitation was caused by the Supreme Court's ruling against Du Pont's holding of General Motors stock. These bearish factors were capped on Monday, June 10, by President Eisenhower's "upset stomach." But the prompt recovery of the President spurred prices to their high of '57. The fall-off since then has mainly been concerned with the tight money situation.

Bonds Hit 20-Year Lows

Corporate and U. S. government bonds declined to the lowest level in more than 20 years in the first half of 1957 as interest rates soared to 24-year peaks.

The scramble for investment capital in a "tight money" market sent borrowing costs up. In a period of inflation, the price of bonds, tied to fixed income, had no place to go but down.

Long range U. S. government bonds were down sharply, settling to historic lows on the next-to-the-last week in June. On Jan. 1, the 40-year 3s were quoted at 91 2-32 bid. Exactly six months later, they were quoted at 87 24-32 a loss of 3 10-32. Their all-time low, set one week earlier, was 86 28-32.

Special Boot Heels Required

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Buddy Baer, famed heavyweight fighter and movie giant, finally got himself a role where he was required to put on elevator heels.

It happened on television's "Gunsmoke" where he was cast as a heavy opposite James Arness. Arness is even taller than Baer.

The scene called for violent fisticuffs between Arness and Baer, but the show's producers have a policy that Arness, as the fearless Marshal Matt Dillon of Dodge City, must never beat up anybody smaller than himself.

Ike Sizes Up Storm Damage As Calamitous

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 29 (AP) President Eisenhower today sized up the situation in hurricane-battered Louisiana as "calamitous." He did so after receiving telephoned official reports from the area.

The President's view of the tragedy, which has taken a heavy toll of lives, was reported to newsmen after he had talked by phone with Val Peterson, former federal Civil Defense administrator, in New Orleans.

At a news conference after the Eisenhower-Peterson talk, White House press secretary James C. Hagerty, said: "The President views it as a calamitous situation. He is very much concerned about the hardship and the suffering in the area."

Eisenhower is spending the weekend at his farm home here. Hagerty telephoned latest reports on the Louisiana situation from Washington this morning, then flew to Gettysburg late in the day to give the chief executive further information. The press secretary was accompanied from Washington by Brig. Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, another White House aide.

Hagerty said the President sounded anew a plea that the American public contribute generously to a Red Cross relief drive.

Milwaukee Heiress Weds Sweetheart Despite Suit

MILWAUKEE, June 29 (UP)—A Milwaukee heiress married her Pennsylvania sweetheart in a private church ceremony late today despite his parents' offorts to stop it with a $500,000 alienation suit.

Mary Lucille Werner and Leland Cummings Jr., both 21, climaxed a hectic year-long courtship in which his Roman Catholic parents bitterly fought the romance by exchanging vows in St. Mathew's Lutheran church.

About 165 invited guests attended the wedding, including the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold J. Werner, who gave the young couple their blessing.

Groom's Parents Absent

But the bridegroom s parents, of Wyncote, Pa., didn't attend. They charged the Werner's with "enticing" their son from his home and Roman Catholic religion with wealth and said they wouldn't recognize the wedding "under any circumstances.

None of young Cummings' relatives attended.

Parents File Suit

Young Cummings has sided with his in-laws throughout the dispute between the parents.

Leland Cummings Sr. filed a $500,000 alienation suit against the bride's father, president of the Wagner Iron Works here.

He charged Werner with luring Lee Jr. away by paying his tuition and other expenses at Harvard University, ferrying him to Milwaukee in a private plane and promising him a $25,000-a-year job.

Mrs. Cummings Sr. said Mary Lucille "shot holes through our heart."

Two Women Accused Of Taking $41,000 From Bank In Mississippi

PONTOTOC, Miss., June 29 (AP)—The FBI today accused two women employes of embezzling "in excess of" $41,000 from the First National Bank of Pontotoc.

Mrs. Sarah Moreland Jr., 35, was charged with taking over $40,000 and Mrs. June Powell over $1,000. Mrs. Moreland had been an employee of the bank since 1941 and Mrs. Powell since 1948. Both worked in the note department.

Bank president John H. Salmon said he requested an audit after he became suspicious of Mrs. Moreland "spending more money than she was making as a bank employee."

The FBI declined to go into details of how the alleged embezzlement took place. Salmon said he had fired both women.

D. H. Marchbanks, federal commissioner at Oxford, said the women would receive a preliminary hearing Monday.

PAT BOONE, America's newest singing boy friend, in his film debut, and the lovable Janet Gaynor, returning to the screen after a 19-year absence, are united with co-stars Terry Moore and Dean Jagger in "Bernadine", opening today at the Paramount Theatre. The Twentieth Century-Fox comedy is in CinemaScope and De Luxe color.

TV notes

Former President Harry S. Truman's appearance as host and guide on CBS Television's "Let's Take a Trip" today will be, in effect, a primer on the functions and importance of the office of president of the United States. The broadcast will be a preview tour of the new Truman Library in Independence, Mo. The library will be dedicated and open to the public for the first time a week later.

Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy co - star in "Clothes Make the Man" a comedy about a garishly-garbed button salesman whose color schemes hilariously upset the new decor in the hotel in which he lives, on the "Schlitz Playhouse" Friday.

The fight of the week will match Gaspar (Indian) Ortega of Mexicali, Mexico, and Larry Baker of New York City when they meet Wednesday night over ABC-TV. The ten - round welterweight bout will originate from Miami Beach.

NEW YORK — Nat "King" Cole's show on NBC becomes a 30 - minute Monday affair beginning at 10 p.m. July 1. There will be a musical replacement for the quarter - hour he has been filling at 7:30 p.m. on Mondays.

The first "Lassie" program of next season will introduce a seven-year-old named Jon Provost who, as the character named Timmy, can be expected to take over the famous dog as the season moves along. Tommy Rettig will be eased out gradually because of age and growth. The first of the new series hits the air Sept. 1.

Oct. 18 is the date ABC will start Frank Sinatra's new TV series. There will be 13 half - hour musicals, 23 half-hour dramatic shows (both on film) and two one - hour live spectaculars. The series will be started with one of the one-hour affairs, 9 to 10 p.m. Frank will star in all of the musicals and the two specs and in 13 of the dramas, while serving as host of 10 of the latter.

Paul Gregory's first contribution of next season to CBS will be a 90-minute spec called "Crescendo," which deals with the development of music in America. Apparently this is an outgrowth of a spec this producer was to have done a couple of seasons back called "The Big Banjo," a study of minstrelsy in the U. S.

SHATTERS RECORDS AT MONZA

US Driver Hits 177 MPH Average

MONZA, Italy, June 29 (AP)—A 15-year veteran of American racing today burned up the "fastest track on earth" at a blistering 177 miles an hour—perhaps the fastest man ever drove on a closed circuit.

Tony Bettenhausen's supercharged eight-cylinder Novi special seemed to be flying as he shattered records to lead ten Americans qualifying for tomorrow's Monza 500 miler.

Daylight showed under his wheels as he shot out from the step-banked turns. The 1951 American champion's big car hit 196 miles an hour on the straightaway. The strain when he hit the turns bent one shock absorber. Three laps around the 2.6 mile oval wore out a tire.

Stunned by speed they could not dropped out of the race that had been billed as the long-awaited track test between American and European cars and pilots.

These were the Jaguars which clean-swept the famed 24-hour race of Lemans, France, last week-end.

Curvy Kim Novak Stars In 'Phffft' Comedy Role

They call Kim Novak "Legs" and, frankly, that nickname is not at all displeasing to the curvy blonde starring with Judy Holliday, Jack Lemmon and Jack Carson Thursday at the Jim Theatre in Columbia Pictures' gay new comedy, "Phffft," a story of romance on the rocks. Kim knows shapely legs did not hurt Marlene Dietrich, Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth and others in their rise to film fame. If Kim can climb to equal heights on her own sensational gams, she has no objection to giving them credit.

In fact, since glamour has become her business, Kim is going all - out to make it as big business as possible. "This is the era of the specialist. The competition in Hollywood is tremendous and if a girl is going to succeed at the glamour job she's really got to work at it." The ash - blonde screen newcomer, with the fire-lit eyes comes fully equipped for her glamour business. In act, she started at the very top of the Hollywood scale, when she received co-billing with such established names, Fred MacMurray and Phil Carey, in her very first motion picture, "Pushover." Likes the title, critics and public alike proved pushovers for Kim's charms; she bowled them over from the moment she came on the screen.

How does a girl break into the movies? Kim's method may not work every time, but if you've got the kind of beauty that should be in pictures, it won't hurt to try. Get on a bicycle — dressed in playshorts, of course—and ride around Hollywood. When Kim did it, the sight of her stunned a passing agent, who brought her to Columbia for a screen test. She wore one of Rita Hayworth's black silk dresses for the test, and filled it to the eminent satisfaction of everyone who saw her. Kim refuses to be called "another" anything, even changing her name to Kim from the original "Marilyn," because she does not want to be called "another Marilyn Monroe." She's smart enough to know the carbon copy never achieves the acceptance of the original.

"Phffft" gives Kim plenty of opportunity to display both her charms and her comedic abilities when she almost steals Jack Lemmon away from Judy Holliday, successfully holding her own against such brilliant laugh-provokers as Judy Holliday, Lemmon and Jack Carson. "Phffft" was written by George Axelrod, whose play, "The Seven Year Itch," has been this year's comedy sensation of Broadway. The picture was directed by Mark Robson and produced by Fred Kohlmar.

'Gunfight At OK Corral' Stars Lancaster, Douglas

One of America's most compelling legends, the story of the unaccountable friendship between the fabled U. S. Marshal of Dodge City and Tombstone, Wyatt Earp and the gun - slinging ex-dentist, Doc Holliday, has been filmed by Paramount with Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas in the lead roles.

Produced by Hollywood's foremost hit- and star - maker, Hal Wallis, and tilted "Gunfight at the O. K. Corral," after the climactic incident that put a bloody period to Tombstone's fierce struggle for law and order, the huge - scale Technicolor drama looms as one of the major Westerns of all time.

Arriving July 7th at the Paramount Theatre, the VistaVision film co-stars Rhonda Fleming, Academy Award - winner Jo Van Fleet and John Ireland, with Lyle Bettger, Frank Faylen and Earl Holliman heading the large supporting cast.

Earl Holliman, one of the members of the supporting cast, is a native of Louisiana, and has appeared in many of the leading films in recent years. Some of the pictures in which he has appeared include "Giant," "The Burning Hills," "East of Sumatra," "The Rain maker," "The Girls of Treasure Island" and "Far Horizons."

Holliman's mother lives in Richland parish.

Set in the roaring days of 1870-82 in Texas, Kansas and Arizona, the film dramatizes the little-know story behind the partnership of the respected and feared lawman Earp and the law-scorning Holliday in their efforts to wipe out the terrorizing Clanton gang and their deadly killer Ringo.

John Sturges, an Oscar-nominee for "Bad Day at Black Rock," directed from a screenplay by the brilliant Leon Uris, of "Battle Cry" fame. The title song, by Ned Washington and Dimitri Tiomkin, Oscar - winner for his "High Noon" song, is sung by Frankie Laine as a running background to the story and is set to become one of the year's smash hit records.

Miss Stanwyck Considered Most Professional Actress

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, June 29 (AP) — Among producers, directors and movie crews, Barbara Stanwyck usually is rated as the most professional of all actresses.

This probably explains why now, in her 80th picture, "Trooper Hook," she is the star — just as she was in "Ladies of Leisure" in 1930.

Barbara says she learned her professionalism on the stage and in vaudeville.

"When the curtain went up at 2:30 p.m. for a Wednesday matinee, that meant you had to be there ready to perform at 2:30—not 2:45 or 3 p.m.

"In the movies I feel if the electricians, make-up men and everybody else can be on the set ready to work at 6:30 a.m., then the star, who probably has had a few servants helping her, owes the crew the courtesy of being on time."

Barbara is so professional that she admits she has no other interests outside of her work.

"My hobby is work," she says. 'Even when I'm between pictures I spend most of my time going to movies so I can learn something from other players."

One thing worries Barbara about the new crop of film players.

"Where can a kid learn timing nowadays? When I started, there were stock companies, vaudeville and burlesque. It was rough and tumble but it was a great school."

Timing is that indefinable something by which Jack Benny can get a laugh merely by outstanding an audience and uttering some normally unfunny line like: "Hmmmmm."

"Unless a young player has live television or stage experience, he can't pick up timing in the movies, timing is done for you by the cutter."

Press Agents Can't Promote Themselves

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie press agents, famous for taking some unknown blonde with obvious physical assets and promoting her to international fame in a few months, can promote anyone but themselves.

Boutyette, a veteran press agent who has numbered Rita Hayworth among his publicity buildups, is particularly incensed at Tony Curtis' portrayal of a press agent in "Sweet Smell of Success."

In the movie, Curtis plays one of the most despicable characters seen on the screen in some time. At no time is he pictured doing a legitimate publicity chore. Instead he functions as a procurer, blackmailer, character assassin and all-around liar.

Boutyette, after seeing the picture, presided at a general membership meeting of his union and asked for protest action. Instead he reports, he got apathy. One member said the screen portrays crooked doctors, crooked lawyers and other professional crooks so why not press agents?

"We're to blame ourselves for the shameful way the movies have depicted us," Boutyette says. "Actually, I don't think there is more conservative or circumspect group in Hollywood than the publicity men."

Lift Appetites By Cooking Out Of Doors

If you're faced with sagging hot-weather appetites this summer, try moving your kitchen outdoors. Your cooking instantly will gain new flavor and favor.

It will be convenient and practical if you have a portable outdoor grill. Food cooked over a charcoal fire just naturally tastes better, and that little extra touch usually is all you need to regain your cookery admirers.

Even on rainy or windy days many families continue to use their outdoor grills. They merely move them into the garage or carport where they are protected from the weather.

New Portable Radio Can't Be Overturned

Have you ever reached out while asleep and tipped your bedside radio off the table and onto the floor?

It need never happen again. Radio engineers have come up with a set that positively can't be tipped.

Actually, it's a combination portable and table radio that has no electric cord to attach, can be carried anywhere, and seems to run "forever" on only six flash light batteries.

Because it has no tubes, this radio withstands without breaking the rough usage ofttimes given portables.

MRS. JOHN HAROLD DAVIS

Miss Alice Mae Tarpley Becomes Bride Of John Harold Davis In Church Ceremony Friday Evening

Miss Alice Mae Tarpley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Anderson Tarpley, became the bride Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the First Christian Church, of John Harold Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Davis, of West Monroe. Reverend R. T. Watson performed the ceremony and bouquets of pink gladioli and pink tapers in branched candelabra decorated the church. Family pews were marked with pink satin ribbons and clusters of pink blossoms.

Bob Oldenberg, organist, and Jennings Wilkins, soloist, presented the nuptial music. George Brian read Elizabeth Browning's "How Do I Love Thee."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of embroidered crystaline and tulle. The embroidered crystaline bodice was finished with scallops at the neck and had small short sleeves. The bouffant tulle skirt was accented with panniers of embroidered crystaline in front and back. Bands of satin studded with bridal pearls held for finger-tip veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and fleur d'amour tied with satin streamers.

Miss Ordie Nell Tarpley, sister of the bride was the maid of honor. Her other attendants included Mrs. Jack Phillips, matron of honor, Mrs. John Tarpley, Miss Sarah Batton, Mrs. Jennings Wilkins, and Mrs. Gerald Brown, bridesmaids. They wore gowns of pink crystallette over white taffeta fashioned with deep V necklines. Flowing panels of matching chiffon fell to the hemline in the back. In their hair they wore bands of pink and carried white fans adorned with feathered pink carnations.

Melinda Kay Davis, wearing a floor length frock of pink crystallette over pink taffeta and sashed with pink chiffon, acted as flower girl. Tommy Semmes was ring bearer.

Sam Davis was his brother's best man and groomsmen and usher included Fred Tarpley, John Tarpley, Rodney Cannon, Harold Bauman, and Joe Jordan. The candlelighters were Berle Palmer and Randall Dunagan.

A reception immediately followed in the fellowship hall of the church. Mrs. Tarpley received her guests in a rose colored lace dress made with rounded neck trimmed with sequins and pearls. With this she wore a small jewelled hat of rose with white carnatior corsage. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Davis, mother of the groom, who chose a blue lace dress with white hat and matching accessories. She wore white flowers. Girl Scout News

Concluding the Craft class taught by Mrs. Leon Noland was an exhibit of the copper enameling done by the girls. Professional - looking indeed were the small trays, earrings, cuff links, and scatter pins made by the girls. Lucky will be the mothers and dads who received the gifts. Some of the girls made crosses to wear on chains. They decorated the trays spattering around tiny leaves in a color that contrasted with the base color. The girls chose bright reds, blues, greens, transparent browns, turquoise and blues, decorated with lumps and threads of glass in modern designs, for some of the trays and jewelry.

Girls enrolled in the class were: Mickey Varnado, Becky Middleton, Milann Gannaway, Penny Nichols, Judy Bamburg, Bonnie Baldo, Susan Cowder, Anne Hall Pat Hogan, and Marty Kate McCarty. They learned to use 'ools and materials with care and to use their own original ideas.

The ultimate goal in camping is the kind Troop 14, Senior Scouts experienced recently, when ten girls and leader, Ethel Easterling, joined 18 Alexandria Scouts for a three day encampment at the latter's campsite. The girls lived in tents, did charcoal cooking, and had good practice in all the details of outdoor living.

Members of the troop who had the privilege of this most advanced camping were: Rose Ann Cascio, Ann Turner, Betty Hines, Marie Nelson, Diane Macknick Ronnie Wilds, Ronnie Hervey Sue Norris, Nancy Martin, and Louise Lester.

There will be no swimming class on Thursday, July 4 and classes will end on Saturday, July 6.

Notices of the training schedule for day camp staff and program aids have been mailed. Any volunteers not receiving one may call the office for information.

MISS SONYA KAY FRANKS' engagement to Michael E. Barnett is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Franks, of Fairbanks. Mr. Barnett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barnett, of Brookhaven, Miss. The wedding will take place at 7:30 o'clock in the evening, August 10, in the Fairbanks Presbyterian Church.

Outdoor Grill Tools Should Be Checked

Now that another outdoor cooking season is here, it's a good idea to check your charcoal grill equipment.

The grill itself may need a little touching up. During the "off season," areas where paint is chipped from the bowl or legs may have rusted. If the bowl needs painting, make sure you use heat resistant paint. Don't paint the inside. Chrome legs, of course, shouldn't be painted, but if they are chipped, varnish or shellac can be used to protect areas that might rust.

A new supply of gravel with which to cover the bottom of the fire bowl also should be obtained. Experiments show medium size stones, from ¼ to ⅜ inch in diameter, are most suitable.

Other items needed are a small rake or tongs with which to manage the fire and a long-handled spatula, fork, and knife to handle the food.

If you use a spit, you need heavy twine, metal foil for drip pans, skewers, and spit forks. Don't forget an extension cord if the spit is turned by an electric motor.

Also handy are heavy potholders or mittens, trays, paper plates and toweling, a carving board, and large salt and pepper shakers.

Cover the pan in which you are melting chocolate to hasten the process. It's best to melt the chocolate over hot water to avoid scorching.

MINT AND LAMB

NEW YORK — Mint - flavored lamb chops make one tasty basis for an outdoor meal. To make, first marinate the chops in this mixture: Combine 1 part vinegar with 3 parts salad oil, and season with minced onion and finely chopped sprigs of fresh mint. Add a little salt and paprika. After the chops have stood in the mixture for several hours or overnight, grill them over hot coals.

Ladies, Throw Those Tweezers Away . . .

by ANN CORNELISON
HAIR REMOVAL CONSULTANT

Certainly you should do something about unfeminine facial hairs. They are conspicuously unattractive on even the fairest face. But please don't tweeze . . .

Tweezing is worse than merely painful, time-wasting and temporary. It actually aggravates your problem of unwanted hair. Medical authorities say that tweezing has two unhappy side effects:

1. Tends to stimulate growth of surrounding hair.
2. Tends to cause the next hair that grows in that follicle to be thicker, longer and blacker.

The other old fashioned methods, shaving, bleaching, depilatories, etc., are no better. They are all just stop-gap measures, temporary and often irritating.

The Thermiquetron Clinic, specializing in permanent hair removal is located at 2000 North Third Street in Monroe.

MRS. WILLIAM LINDSEY SPIVEY, JR.

Spivey-Cox Vows Pledged At Candelight Ceremony

Miss Jean Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edward Cox, and William Lindsey Spivey, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsey Spivey of Waco, Texas, exchanged marriage vows by candlelight Saturday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the First Baptist Church of Crossett.

The Rev. Dan R. Robinson, of Minden, Louisiana, performed the double - ring ceremony before a background of ivy interspersed with daisies. Floor baskets of shasta daisies with lace and emerald fern stood at each end of the chancel, with standing candelabra holding an unbroken line of lighted tapers across the back of chancel.

Candles were lighted by William Keith Nutter and Robert McCaughan. Miss Gertrude Alcorn was organist, and Miss Patricia Pritchard of Livingston, Texas, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional gown of white imported silk shantung. The portrait neckline of the sculptured bodice was outlined with lace accented by iridescent pailettes and pearls. Long sleeves tapered to lily points over her wrists. The voluminous skirt of her gown swept in deep folds to a chapel train in back. Her fingertip veil of imported French illusion fell from aplateau of lace with pearl - encrusted scallops accented with tear - drop pearls. she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and tuberoses.

Miss Eleanor Rice was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Brown, of Freeport, Texas; Miss Rita Russell; and Mrs. John Gabbert, of Waco. They were dressed alike in waltz - length dresses of yellow chiffon with full skirts. The empire waistline of their dresses was accented with wide flat bows in back, one at the natural waistline, and one higher at the empire line. They wore wide - brimmed crownless hats of starched tulle banded with matching satin ribbon which terminated in flat bows in back. They each carried a flaring Milan straw basket of shasta daisies and ivy.

John Paul Zemanek, of Waco; was best man. Groomsmen were George Owens, Robert Herbert, and Harold Dodd, all of Waco; and James Barnhart of Des Plaines, Illinois.

At the reception in the church parlor the bride's table, centered by a tiered wedding cake, was covered with white organdy overlaid with white teffeta, swagged and caught with nosegays of shasta raisies and maline. The floral arrangement was of shasta daisies and pale yellow maline, with white tapers arranged in a crystal epergne.

Assisting at the reception were Miss Barbara Taylor and Peggy Ross, who served the cake, and Miss Norma White and Miss Rosel Hightower, of Bastrop, who served punch. Miss Betty Hines presided at the bride's book. Also assisting were Mrs. John Andrews, Mrs. Woodrow Hines, Mrs. John McKimmy, Mrs. Earl Rice, and Mrs. Hampton Etheridge, Jr.

For travel the bride chose a suit of ice blue silk and cotton with white accessories. She pinned a rose from her bridal corsage on her shoulder. The couple will be at home in Waco, where both will continue studies at Baylor University.

WHY GROW OLD

To Be Natural, Forget Self— You'll Be Gay, Enthusiastic

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

There is probably no charm so disarming as complete naturalness. By this I do not mean a dreary, destructive frankness which informs you of your faults, which tells you that your new hat is unbecoming or your husband is unfaithful.

Nor do I mean to suggest lips without benefit of lipstick, shiny noses, uncurled hair, unpenciled eyebrows or membership in a nudists' camp.

The naturalness of which I sing comes from a lack of self-consciouness. This can only happen when a woman is so in love with life and so interested in others that she forgets herself. This frees her to be perceptive, responsive, gay and enthusiastic. It allows her to express with spontaneity, the varied facets of her nature and to throw herself into the moods of others.

Runs for His Life

Men like mystery but they also like to be comfortable, and there is nothing which so comforts and intrigues a man as a keenly alive woman who is herself. The ablelife when personally confronted with the brand of synthetic mystery which is concocted of slinky gowns, double or triple falsies, umbrella eyelashes and rouge-distorted lips. Only the very young or the emotionally immature man is caught in a trap like this.

The mystery which is attractive to men lies in vibrancy due tomentment emotional and physical vitality, in a variety of moods and ideas and interests, in the eternally new, and not quite known, YOU. I think the nicest compliment my husband ever gave me was when he said, "Jo, there have been many times when I have become exasperated with you but I'll say this, you have never bored me."

Watch Out for Ruts

We women are apt to get into ruts of viewpoint with years of marriage. We sometimes fall into these because of fatigue, worries, stresses and fears of all sorts. Unless we watch it we may react to certain statements or situations in the very same manner, year after years, so that our spouse knows what we will say or do long before we open our mouth or make a move.

Through habit or inertia we may lose what was once our natural self. Perhaps your romance will quicken if you will make an effort to understand viewpoints new to your general conception of things, if you can free yourself of prejudices and bitterness; if you do not always show the usual reaction to a given situation; if you discover what you really are and then be yourself.

If you would like to have my leaflet "Keeping Romance Alive," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 63 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Tomorrow: "Freedom from Being Needed Like a Death."

Carrow-Lacy Vows Pledged By Candlelight

Against a background of southern smilax and green palms, white candles burned in glowing spirals and flanked the altar where white specimen chrysanthemums were placed. The occasion was the marriage at the First Baptist Church in Castor of Carolyn Lacy and Guy Elmer Carrow. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Len Lacy of Castor, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thomas Carrow of Williamston, North Carolina.

The Reverend Roy Grant heard their vows. Mrs. W. E. Clark of Tallulah played traditional wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Ellis Martin of Ringgold, soloist. Just prior to the playing of Wagner's processional Mrs. Lacy and Mrs. Carrow were seated. The bride's mother wore light blue chantilly lace with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother also wore blue chantilly lace.

Against the background of greenery and summer flowers the bride's attendants made a pretty picture as they stood in their frocks of pale pink lace and summer taffeta. They were princess styled with lace inserts in front, sides and back. They wore small veils which were attached to pearl bandeaus.

Mrs. Orie Russell Barnes was matron of honor and Mrs. R. B. Hitchcock, Mrs. Jack Minor and Miss Lois Landess were bridesmaids. They all stood before the altar with Orie Russell Barnes, David Starlin McClain and George Fleming Griffing.

The bride's flower girl, Cynthia Ann Riser and Master Rusty Barnes, the ringbearer, preceded her down the aisle. She entered with her father and was gowned in bridal white silk organdie and Chantilly lace over taffeta. The lace bodice arose into a sweetheart neckline and extended into sleeves ending at the wrist in points. The skirt swept into a chapel train. A fingertip veil of illusion fell from a bandeau of lace and she carried a white chiffon fan of gardenias and stephanotis. Guy Elmer Carrow and his best man, Leslie Thomas Carrow, his father, awaited her at the altar.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Lacy were hosts at a reception at their home. Mrs. William G. Ainsworth, sister of the bride, welcomed guests at the door of entrance hall and registrede them in the brides' book. On the table where the bride's book was placed was a decorated candle. The bridal couple and their mothers received at the entrance of the living room. The bride's table held at one end the tiered wedding cake and at the other a cut glass punch bowl. Forming a centerpiece for the bridal table were two miniature wedding bells placed on reflector and outlined with plumosus fern and were flanked by two three-branched candelabra holding tall white tapers. Those assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. Cecil Batts, sister of the groom, from Williamston, North Carolina, and aunts of the bride, Mrs. T. W. Leonard of Bastrop; Mrs. W. D. Riser, Mrs. Tom Downs and Mrs. Laura Hadwin of Castor.

Out of town guests were Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Leonard, Bastrop; Miss Patricia Hearon, Jonesboro; George F. Griffing, Gilbert; David S. McClain, Mrs. George Landess, Miss Lois Landess, Miss Lee Landess, George Landess, Baton Rouge; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Shelby, Mr. and Mrs. L. Best, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Watson, Arcadia; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lawson, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Weaver, Mrs. C. J. Conley, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Culpepper, Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Corley of Ringgold; Mr. and Mrs. D. W. McLeish of Bryceland; Mrs. L. W. Williams, Minden; Mr. and Mrs. Davis Gleason, and Mrs. Marion J. Goodwill of Shreveport; Mrs. Cecil Batts and Bobby Batts of Williamston, North Carolina; Mrs. W. E. Clark, Tallulah.

MRS. GUY ELMER CARROW

Texas Wedding Of Interest

An out of town wedding, of interest here, celebrated in San Antonio, Texas, was that of Miss Carroll Bennett Brown, Jr. She is the daughter of Mrs. Cecelia Carder and G. C. Henckel. He is the son of Mrs. C. Bennett Brown and the late Mr. Brown, all of San Antonio. The groom is also the nephew of Duffy Brown and the the grandson of Mrs. Belle Brown of this city.

Their vows were said in Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church with Father Louis Moriarity officiating. Miss Margaret Hoch was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white nylon point d'esprit over taffeta with a mandarin collar of Brussels lace. It was designed with a fitted bodice with bands of lace extending into a bouffant skirt in a Swiss apron effect. She wore a short circular veil attached to a crown of seed pearls and carried a single white orchid on a white lace covered prayer book.

Mrs. Helen Hight was the matron of honor and Miss Karen Henckel, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. Donna Marie Henckel, another niece was flower girl. Joseph Schreiber, Jr. was the best man to the groom and ushers were G. C. Henckel, Jr. and Donald Henckel, brothers of the bride, Charles Newsom, Jr. and Rhey Hollett.

ORANGE PEEL FOR SALADS

NEW YORK — Add zest to tossed green salad by cutting in some cooked orange peel. Cut the peel into small, thin slivers. Cook for five minutes in enough water to cover. Cool, Scatter the peel over the greens, then toss with a dressing of heavy cream seasoned with lemon juice, salt, mustard and cayenne.

Cook pitted dates in orange juice until they are soft and the orange juice is absorbed. Use as a filling for a white cake; cover with chocolate frosting.

If you put medium - sized sweet potatoes into a hot oven, they'll bake in about half an hour.

MISS GERALDINE TATUM

Miss Geraldine Tatum Married To James Bryant Cochrane, In Chapel At Greensboro, North Carolina

The wedding of Miss Geraldine Bennette Tatum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lennon Ayers Tatum of Monroe, to Mr. James Bryant Cochrane of Greensboro, North Carolina, was an event of June twenty - ninth. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cochrane of Troy, N. C.

The chapel of the First Baptist Church was aglow with tapers as the prenuptial concert was given by Mrs. Jack Bowden of Durham, N. C., who accompanied the vocalist, Mrs. Ernest Eppley, as she sang the traditional songs. Seating the guests were Messers. William Miller, B. Roger Lassiter, William E. Thayer and Dr. Tally Lassiter.

The Rev. A. L. Parker of the Asheboro Baptist Church was the officiant. Standing with the groom and his best man, Mr. William E. Perry, to receive the vows of the young couple.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who presented her to the groom. The bride was costumed in silvery nylon chiffon, fashioned with a round lace-edged neckline. The skirt of four tiers dipped to a train for an added back interest. A tiny Juliet cap, edged with lace and pearls held her fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a southern nosegay of pink roses and white daisies, satin tied.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Elton Frazier, sister of the groom, with dawn pink net and lace, with tiny ruffles of net and lace alternating down the back. Her bouquet was arranged in tiers of pink blossoms.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Tatum, was frocked in blue lace, complemented by a nosegay of spring flowers. The mother of the groom, Mrs. Cochrane, wore lavender lace with pale pink blooms in her corsage.

The wedding trip took the couple to Fontana Village in North Carolina, and upon their return they will be at home at 1846 Villa Drive, Greensboro.

Color Clashes Can Pep Up Decorating

NEW YORK — One interior decorator says tension will keep a room from being dull in decor.

Not the kind of tensior which makes the occupant nervous and jumpy, said decorator John Abbate, but one that gives a room sparkle.

Abbate said the tension may be one of color, furnishings, or scale. He adds that its balance is delicate and must be treated with a careful hand.

Abbate said color tension is a color balance which excites the eye with a pleading contrast. He suggested a pale blue with a vivid green, plus small accents of orange - vermillion, or a Chinese red combined with shell pink, black and gray.

Abbate said tension plays a big part in relating period furniture to a modern room. The secret is to bridge the gap with accessories, such as a fragment of carved marble, stone or wood.

One word of caution in furniture tension. "Of course you shouldn't hang a gaudy Indian headdress over a Louis Fifteenth Bergere," said the decorator. "But a wood carving native of the locale would look wonderful over a painted French provincial chest."

Abbate said tension of scale is illustrated by the placement of a number of small objects on a massive piece of furniture.

He suggested topping a long chest with a series of polychrome figures varying in height from 12 to 18 inches, or a collection of handsome shells.

Abbate urged homemakers to be brave in decoration. "Tried and true formulas are fine, but the offbeat element is the thing that creates real and lasting interest," he said.

Miss Evelyn Durr Becomes Bride Of Thomas Stodghill, Jr., In Rites At Winnsboro Baptist Church

WINNSBORO — The First Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony uniting two prominent Winnsboro families when Miss Mary Evelyn Durr and Thomas Whitfield Stodghill, Jr., were united in holy wedlock. The marriage was solemnized on Saturday, June 22, at 6:30 o'clock. Miss Durr is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Durr and the bridegroom's parents are the Rev. and Mrs. T. W. Stodghill, Sr.

The Rev. C. B. Hall, of the First Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. W. H. Bengtson, of the Winnsboro First Methodist church, were the officiating ministers at the double - ring ceremony.

Arrangements of white flowers against a background of greenery formed the setting for the ceremony. Candlelighters were Jimmie Durr, Jr., and Tony Durr, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. C. L. Moore, Jr., presented a program of pre - nuptial music, and accompanied Tommy Tucker who sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride entered on the arm of her father. She was gowned in a white silk organza, over taffeta, with a scalloped neckline. Appliques of lace embroidered with irridescent sequins and seed pearls decorated the bodice. Long sleeves came to points over the hand. The skirt extended to ballerina length. Her fingertip veil of illusion was imported silk. The headdress was fashioned of sequins and seed pearls in the form of leaves. She carried a bridal bouquet of split white carnations centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Tommy Tucker, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. She wore a nile green dotted swiss nylon over taffeta ballerina length model designed with full skirt, rounded neckline, and short cap sleeves trimmed in green taffeta. The bodice of the gown was trimmed in taffeta with bows in the front and back. Her headdress was a small headband of daisies. She wore white shortie gloves and carried a nosegay of daisies.

The bridesmaids were Miss Jackie Jackson and Mrs. Eleanor Williamson. They wore gowns identically designed to the matron of honors, with daisy nosegays and also wearing identical headdress.

Tommy Bankston served the bridegroom as best man, and Tommy Womble and Daryle Dean served as groomsmen and ushers.

Mrs. Durr wore a smoke rose faille dress with a satin band around the lace bodice. Her accessories were black. She wore a pink orchid corsage.

Mrs. Stodghill was wearing a pale blue polished cotton trimmed with bands of blue satin. She wore white accessories and a white orchid.

Reception

The bride's table was overlaid with white lace tablecloth over green. Crystal bowls of punch were served from either end of the table. The tiered wedding cake, with daisy nosegays used around the base, centered the table. Candelabra with white tapers were used on either side.

Upon their return home they plan to reside in Winnsboro.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. J. E. Stodghill, Mrs. Lula McMahn and Buddy McMahn, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Stodghill and Charlotte Stodghill, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Stodghill and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Taylor, Jr. of Rayville; Mrs. Lynn May of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Culbert Lee, Misses Margaret Lee, Marian Huckaby, and Julia Williams of Monroe, Miss Jackie Jackson of Tylertown, Miss.; Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spinks, of Vidalia; Miss Ann Choate, of Helena, Ark.; Miss Catherine Underwood, Miss Carolyn Bennett and Miss Marilyn Brown of Baton Rouge and Mrs. R. J. Durr of Marthaville.

MISS JERRY FORD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coy J. Ford, is engaged to Joel O. Antley, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Antley of West Monroe. Plans for the wedding will be announced at a later date.

PAST AND PRESENT

Many Find Tracing Of Ancestry A Good Hobby

By MARIE KENT

You know who you are — but can you prove it? Know your ancestors! In this age when people are hobby conscious, why not consider one that will prove to be a useful and innocent pastime as well as being valuable and informative. Once started on your treasure hunt, you never want to let go. Although you make slow progress, each link welded is cause for a greater interest and thrill.

Ours is a young nation, and by being so busy making it the greatest of all nations we have not taken the time to "write it down." Not only have we gotten out of the habit of keeping personal records of these vital statistics but we permitted our governing bodies to forget it also.

Genealogy, a division of history, is the study of lives of ordinary men and women and cannot be separated from the great sweep of national and international events. Get in touch with your local Ouachita Genealogical and Historical Society and share in the fellowship; join with them in their search for elusive ancestors. Genealogy, as a hobby requires hard work, time and patience, but as you go out into the field of research you become more interested in the history and background of our wonderful American heritage.

Did you know that Louisiana can probably boast of the most unique population of any state in the union? It is little wonder that Louisiana is so replete with interesting genealogical data. The local Ouachita Genealogical and Historical Society has purchased the copies of cemetery records as compiled by the D. A. R.'s, which have just been released. Others will be purchased as they are completed. These along with several other books which have been donated will be placed in a research room for use by the members of our society. May we suggest that if you wish to contribute in memory of a loved one a book for our research room will be much appreciated.

In search for genealogical material you also come upon old records, pictures and relics. These too must me collected and preserved for posterity. Most of us love these old things that reflect the way of life of our forefathers but with the modern homes and way of life today we cannot very well keep them. This situation was one of the things that inspired the pet project of the local society; the establishment of a museum for this area. The collection is growing each day but we still have a long, rough road to travel. We welcome any help you may wish to offer.

Any relic that represents local history is a prized donation. Some of the old things that are seldom seen today and which we do not have are watch fobs, mustache combs, top hats, band combs and curling irons. Make your donation soon by calling Mrs. Travis Tynes, phone FA 2-6476.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Test the effectiveness of a fabric finish when you shop by crushing the material in your hand. This will show how well it resists wrinkles and sheds creases.

Deodorize jars and bottles by pouring a solution of water and dry mustard into them, then letting them stand for several hours before washing.

To prevent de-tufting a candlewick bedspread while laundering, place it in a pillow slip before putting in the washing machine.

When making cotton draperies put all hems in by hand. Use long, loose slip stitches. Hand finishing means the drapes will hang better.

A marinade for seafood, meat or vegetables is usually made of vinegar (or lemon juice) and salad oil.

Many good cooks like to heat pans in which popovers are to be baked before adding the batter.

Add a quarter teaspoon of olive oil to the water in which you are boiling spaghetti to keep pasta strands separate.

Is there a ricer in your kitchen? Then rice boiled potatoes directly into a serving dish and top with thin slices of butter and a dusting of paprika. The potatoes stay fluffy this way.

He states that they were not included in the newly formed group.

Bible Words for Today

MATTHEW 5:17 — "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." (King James Version)

"My son Hannibal will be a great general," said Hamilcar, "because of all my soldiers he knows best how to obey." The greatest soldiers of the cross have been obedient to the law of God.

The Ten Commandments are rules for the building of character. Jesus did not repeal them — he fulfilled the law, and under grace and love a higher ethical life is required.

A master and slave went fishing. On their way back late at night, the master became sleepy, and turning the helm over to Mose, he pointed out the North Star and urged him to keep his eye on it. But the servant's eyes became heavy and he fell asleep, too. When he awakened, he called his master frantically. "Wake up! Show me another star. I've done run clean past this one!"

Many have lost sight of the law of God, but we can no more run past it than past the North Star.

About once in a century there appears someone like Francis of Assisi who is willing to be utterly obedient, and God uses that person to make Christian history. Where is there such a person for this century?

SEEING THE LIGHT

Seeing the light on any subject will be a good deal easier if the "subject" has the right color! Above all, avoid eyestrain from sharply contrasting areas of strong colors. Softly contrasting pastel shades for floors and walls contribute to the restful yet efficient lighting to the home. Ceramic tile, offering more than 200 pastel shades, is one of the more versatile surfacing materials used to help achieve correct illumination in the home.

MY ANSWER

By Billy Graham

QUESTION: Before my conversion I came into a debt through gambling. I do not believe that I can continue this practice now that I am a Christian. Will you tell me what to do about the debt?

ANSWER: Your practice of gambling that incurred the debt is one thing and your obligation to discharge a debt, no matter how it was contracted is another. If you owe a certan amount to someone, you are still in debt to them, and your conversion did not wipe out the debt. In fact the Christian has been cautioned to "owe no man anything but to love one another."

But this debt is more than an obligation. It is a wonderful opportunity to make known to your former gambling friends the meaning of conversion. They will see in this act a demonstration of the Christian life and through this you might well have your best opportunity to glorify God through a testimony. Pray that God will give you wisdom as you fulfill your obligation.

About Homes And Gardens

Plant Flowers Now For Fall Weddings

By Mildred Swift

Well, now the June brides are all married and happily on their way in life. Did you notice what a big contribution flowers made to the beauty and perfection of those weddings? If you're planning a fall wedding you could put out chrysanthemum plants now. Get the early blooming varieties that will give you flowers by October.

If you have friends with tuberoses, engage the blooms now, as they flower until frost. Too late to plant these. For mass effects in the garden in the fall, plant marigold and vinca seed now. In August plant zinnia seed. I you can find caladium and gladiolus bulbs, they'll be an asset. Put out the caladiums now. Plant glad bulbs ninety days before you want them to bloom. You may find a few of these bulbs in the seed stores or nurseries.

More Gardening

You can root gardenias and oleanders in water. Just put a stem of either in a jar of water. After a good set of roots has developed, plant the stems on the shady side of the house and keep watered all summer. In January you can transplant to any place in the garden.

Cut out and burn the dead foliag of iris. It's not too late to work some bone meal around your bearded iris.

Another lovely gray green ground cover is strawberry begonia. Those who have plants always have extra ones to give new gardeners.

From the research center, Beltsville, Maryland, comes this information about hydrangeas. Aluminum sulphate put around the plant produces blue flowers, but it also intensifies the yellows, which scientists have found to be present in the flowers, regardless of flower color. If the aluminum makes the yellow strong enough and the yellow then combines with one of the other colors, the result may be one of the off - colors, a magenta or mauve. The ratio of yellow to blue determines whether the flower will be clear or one of the offshades.

Food In The News

July good features are turkeys and ice cream. Other plentiful foods are eggs, milk, and dairy products, peaches, lemons, limes, frozen strawberries, vegetable fats and oils, peanut butter, onions, peanuts and fresh home grown vegetables. The menu of the month, excellent for July 4 is:

Barbecued turkey.
Parsley buttered new potatoes.
Tossed summer vegetable salad with tomato wedges.
Fresh green string beans.
Milk.
Peach chiffon squares.

Let's eat turkey this summer! A few years ago, this might have been considered a quaint idea. Turkey until recently was a special day dish for Thanksgiving and Christmas. Now any day in the year may be turkey day because this bird, frozen, in all sizes and weights is available at an attractive price. Budget - conscious, taste - conscious homemakers will want to make the most of this abundant supply.

For barbecued turkey use a 6 to 12 pound thawed bird. A rotisserie makes the job easier, because you don't have to hand turn. A 12 - pound bird takes about four hours to cook. Baste the first 3¼ hours with a mixture of equal part of butter or margarine, salt and vinegar. The last 45 minutes use this barbecue sauce. 1 cup worcestershire sauce, 2 sticks butter or margarine, 1 cup vinegar, 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons paprika, 2 tablespoons salt. Mix and let come to a boil.

2 cups sliced fresh peaches.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
1½ cups vanilla wafer crumbs.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Place over boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add peaches, lemon juice, sugar and salt. Cool until slightly thickened. Chill the evaporated milk, pour in a chilled bowl and whipp until stiff. Fold in the peach mixture. Line 7 x 11 pan with half the cooky crumbs. Pour peach mixture over crumbs. Top with remaining crumbs. Chill until firm.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Roses Stand Tests In South's Gardens

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Rose Notes

One of the toughest tests any new rose has to face when it is being tried out all over the United States is the heat, sun and glare test it undergoes in the trial gardens of the south. The following might be called "Rose Notes of a Southerner." They were made last week in one of the National Rose Test Gardens in the south.

Perhaps you are wondering what is meant by the "glare" part of the test. As we have said many times in the column, the most beautiful flower in the world cannot be seen if the sunshine is so bright that the eye has almost closed up and cannot see it. Colors are simply not the same when seen under the brilliant sun that half closes our eyes here in the south. A very light pink looks almost dirty or washed out. It takes a somewhat brighter and heavier pink to give the effect of light pink. This is true of almost all the light colored roses.

With this partial explanation, let us see how some of the newer roses impressed a southerner: the great floribunda rose, Fashion, deserves all the popularity bestowed upon it for many reasons. (we shall just lift the notes made on the spot out of my notebook as they are.) "How could it fail! Tops in growth and floriferousness; even color and little sun fading if any. It is that taking shade of medium bright pink with a suggestion of salmon. Has enough petals to satisfy those who prefer double roses but enough of the open centered look — the "wild rose" look — to satisfy the single rose lovers. What a rose! Registers right in the glare of this hot sun." Well, what more can one say for a rose? Yet there is more that can be said. The growth of Fashion is dense, with foliage all through the plant. In rose trials, it usually has foliage down to the ground. All in all, it is an outstanding rose for us.

Paris Garden

In 1954, I made notes on the roses in the famous Bagatelle test garden in Paris. On June 25, my notebook says of the rose, Mrs. Inge Poulsen: "Wonderful mass of tinted white in effect, though the fresh flowers are light pink with orange interiors: Floriferous." I wondered if it would stand up to the intensity of the light back home in the south. The mass looks a little too washed out to be convincing in the full sun after it is in full bloom. In a garden where there are long shadows it is better. I believe I would prefer a real white rose if I had to grow it in the sun.

Poulsen's Bedder is a medium to light pink that stands up to the heat and sun and is bright enough to look light pink in the glare. Golden Fleece is "anything but golden; light, clean pinky buff. Old flowers not much lighter than fresh ones, so that they make an even colored mass. "Betsy McCall" stands up to heat and glare; luscious color - light buff or between pink and salmon — even colored mass." (to be continued next week.)

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Patio Garden Club Stages Week's Show

By Mary M. Jardine

In the horticulture section blue ribbons were awarded as follows: Mrs. Betty Jackson for pink verbena and Mrs. Paul Ransom for white zinnias and yellow zinnias.

Mrs. Robert Carter and Mrs Jack Fluck were awarded top score in the arrangement class. For their symmetrical arrangement, modern in feeling, they selected a green Mexican glass candy jar, round in form. The top of the jar was used as a base, secured with floral clay. Ginger lily foliage was placed in vertical pattern with one leaf over the rim of the container. Symmetry was achieved by placements of furled leaves at either side. Rhythm was attained by the use of large zinnias shading from bright yellow to deep orange. Jerusalem cherries were grouped on either side low in the design. This was an excellent example of rhythm in a floral design which is defined as "The smooth flow of material and color which carries the eye easily through the design It is usually attained by the use of repetition, gradation and line direction."

Mrs. Benton Wakefield, Jr., was awarded second place blue ribbon for her elegant composition in gold and white. Her container was an antique white compote of graceful proportions. In this Mrs. Wakefield arranged a "Tussy-Mussy" (concentric circles of small flowers around larger flowers) of straw flowers and bitter - sweet. The design had been sprayed with gold and then sprayed with white paint. The overall effect was most elegant with just a touch of gold glinting through the white. The design was free - standing and very effective from all sides.

Mrs. D. V. Loflin, Jr., created a most interesting composition of dried materials and waxed fruit. Th container wa: a large polished compote of Honduras mahogany. This composition was designed for use in a mahogany panceled room. the asymetrical pattern was achieved with a vertical line of date palm branch and embryo palm at a right angle. The third dimension was of desert primrose. Palmetto fans strengthened the background with brown magnolia leaves for contrast in color and texture. As a center of interest waxed fruit was grouped most effectively with the colors subtly blended. Purple grapes, deep purple plums, yellow pears, green limes and a soft rosy peach. This design created a great deal of interest. All of the materials as described above may be obtained from your favorite florist.

Our daylilies have given us so much pleasure. They have been in continuous bloom since early May. Marse Connell bloomed for a period of over a month. Garden Charm and Cradle Song are open in the evening. There are many varieties that stay open in the evenings or else open in evening and stay "awake" until the next day. Mrs. B. F. Bonner is a fine pale yellow, and a recurrent bloomer. Although not so new it is still on the 1957 Popularity Poll. There are hundreds of varieties both in color, form and size. These wonderful flowers are perfect for the busy or lazy gardener.

Lessen Work Through Use Of Short Cuts

By Cynthia Lowry
AP Newsfeatures Writer

From now on we are in the period of gardening when beginners understand what the veterans meant when they said not to bite off more than they could chew. The two months ahead are, from a standpoint of work to be done the dullest of the gardening year although it is the time when one should enjoy the bloom and the flowers.

Every how - to - garden book worth the purchase price somewhere contains the warning about not digging up more garden space than you can handle without making a slave of yourself. I suspect that almost no gardener, tilling his own soil for the first time, ever pays any attention to the admonition. My opinion on this subject is based on the fact that every first-year home owner I know starts out with a complete truck garden: including corn, zuccini and melons. By their fourth year, they usually simmer down to a dozen tomato vines, lettuce and radishes.

Obviously, the more garden beds and vegetable plots you dig and plant, the more rows there are to be hoed. And when this time of the year rolls around, the footage which seemed so inadequate in the spring suddenly becomes acres under the hot sun. And when a dry spell comes, those required hosings are never - ending jobs which will make the quarterly water bill the size of your income-tax.

There are, even for those of us who have found just about the right sized garden for our tastes, a number of short - cuts and step-savers. First, there are ways to make the job of mowing the lawn a lot easier. Arrange the plantings so that the lawn consists of open spaces, uncluttered by a tree here, a bush there, a little flower bed in the middle which must be mowed around and later trimmed.

The trick is to put trees and shrubs in groupings or in a screen and to avoid those fussy individual plantings which make more work. Anyway, from today's viewpoint, they aren't considered the best use of larger materials.

Banks are hard to mow: they can be remodeled into level spots with a dry wall or retaining wall taking the place of a slope. Or they can be planted with material like pachysandra — which needs little attention once established — or with sweet - smelling herbs, like lemon thyme which eliminates the use of a mower.

Step - savers include a basket in which all the necessary tools may be carried; a garden cart or rubber - wheeled barrow in which tools, peatmoss, fertilizer and soil conditioners may be hauled around. Sharp tools in good cutting condition may not save steps, but they sure do save your back. A handy garden device is a short apron with three or four roomy pockets. I find that I wind up a gardening day much less fatigued if I map out three or four different jobs, and change frequently from one to another: like transplanting, pruning a shrub or two, fertilizing or top - dressing a smallish section of perennial border, and clipping dying flower heads from one or two areas in the garden. Any change of chore rests tired muscles.

INSECT TIME IS HERE

By RONALD AUTRY

VERGNA, N. J. (AP)—The insect age has arrived at our house. Every parent of a 9 - year - old will understand.

Butterflies, bumblebees, and ladybugs are collected. Plastic bags stuffed with leaves and caterpillars are everywhere. Insect books lie all around.

But, most of all, we have tenodera sinensis. Or, rather, tenodera sinensis has us. It was like this:

A friend plucked a foreign object from a prize tree the other day and started to burn it. Our observant heir was outraged.

"Those are praying mantis eggs," he said sternly. "It's against the law in New Jersey to kill praying mantises. They're good for gardens."

Grudging Permission

He asked permission to take the thing home. Permission was granted, grudgingly.

Four days passed. Collector's mother opened his closet to find it full of insects. They had hatched in the absent - minded collector's pocket.

The insects were brown, a half-inch long, quick and crawly, mean looking — in short, baby mantises, less popularly known as tenodera sinensis.

Mother summoned reinforcements. Collector arrived at full speed.

For a moment, mother and son faced each other — she accusingly; he proudly.

"I knew I could do it," he cried.

Mother set to work to drive the insects out the window.

"Help!"

Suddenly, a cry of dismay.

"You killed one. I'm going to call a policeman. It's against the law too kill them."

The insects won. Those who wanted to go out went. Those who liked it better inside stayed.

Yes, we still have the praying mantises with us.

They stare at us solemnly, meditatively. I don't dare speculate on what they're thinking, but I'm sure they're not praying.

Curtain Cleaning

In modern fiberglass curtains you get many advantages but the old fashioned way of cleaning them is the best. To wash fiberglass curtains, carefully hand wash them. Use a mild detergent in warm water. After you have washed them gently rinse them in clear water by dipping the curtains up and down several times. Roll the curtains gently in a bath towel to remove the excess moisture or drip dry them over a bar. Fiberglass curtains will dry in about 5 minutes. But heed the warning from the home management specialist who says to resist all temptation to throw your fiberglass curtains into your washing machines. Twisting and bending and wringing of fiberglass curtains will soon demolish them. Besides that is work. Irnoning is not necessary. Starch and bleach will damage them. Fiberglass curtains are strong and nonflammable. Gentle hand washing is the best cleaning treatment you can give them.

Flower Tips

To help your nandina bush hold its berries apply a double handful of phosphate fertilizer about 3 or 4 inches from the plant. Work it into the soil carefully.

Prune running roses as soon as blooming is over. Large, flowering types, such as Paul's Scarlet, should have one or two of the oldest canes recovered and others cut back slightly.

A Fire In Your Future?

Each year fires kill 3,500 rural residents and injure 300,000. In the last ten years, fires have destroyed almost $1.5 billion worth of farm property. The United States department of agriculture puts last year's toll at $145 million. The seven major causes of farm fires are faulty flues and heaters, flammable roofs, spontaneous combustion, cigarette smoking, defective electrical wiring, gasoline and kesrosene, and lightning. Now is the time to check on these hazards.

Heading For A Fall?

Purdue University reports that most farm accidents happen during May, June and July when there is more work in the fields, more machinery in use, and children are home on vacation. Check your machinery for safety and keep children away from dangerous equipment.

Grand Lodge Inductions Set For Monday

J. E. Jackson of Baton Rouge, grand master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Mrs. Virginia Bohnsack of Maplewood, La., president of the Rebecca assembly of Louisiana, will be in Monroe Monday night, July 1, for the joint public installation of officers of Ouachita lodge No. 2 and Ouachita Rebekah Lodge No. 84.

The installations will take place in the Odd Fellows Hall on Kansas avenue at 8 p. m.

TERRACES AND PATIOS

With terraces and patios dotting the backyards of both old and new homes, quarry tile is finding increased favor for use as an outdoor home building material. Quarry tile, unaffected by the elements, resistant to rot and termites, makes the ideal floor material for exposed areas of the home. Rainwater will quickly roll off quarry tile terraces if they are constructed at a slight slope and tile's impervious surface will dry in a matter of minutes.

NEW BRACES

There's a new type of steel bridging designed to replace the wood bridging that long has been used with wood joists. The steel braces, locked into place to form an X, are put up without tools of any kind. Anchor spurs on the braces dig deeper into the joists when there is a shrinkage of the wood, thus preventing squeaks caused by unstable joists.

Keep you mower sharp. The brownish patina you see on many lawns is the result of mowers "bruising off" the grass instead of cutting it of cleanly. Reel type mowers should be set at the proper clearance and rotaries should be sharpened before each use with a hand stone.

Build Walls Of Concrete For Garden

A humdrum back yard can be perked up with a "garden" wall - built by you. Using concrete blocks, you can lay up an interesting wall along the rear lot lines.

Strong, durable materials, such as well - mortared concrete blocks, will prevent a rotting or sagging look. Also a good footing or base is necessary.

By laying up a common masonry unit of 8x8x16, you can get a variety of patterns. Try a lattice work effect by leaving uniform open spaces between the units in each row.

A "three - dimensional" effect comes through use of special block. It may be obtained by slightly recessing units at regular intervals ineach row. Or alternate half widths (eight-inch wide units) with 16-inch units for another pattern.

Split block or slump block, four inches high, have a rustic or stonelike texture to aid your decorative scheme.

And then there are sections in the U.S. where you can get curved units. These make walls with especially graceful lines, according to Portland Cement designers.

DARK TOWERS

Abe Rogoff is a success — and this novel tells how he hates it and what he does about it.

In effect he's next to next to the top in the Tower Insurance Co. thanks to his friend Bill Norden, a vice president. But as this story opens, Bill kills himself, leaving wife, daughter who has been intimate with Abe's son, mistress, a superior at Tower who can't understand how Bill could throw it all away, and Abe who wonders whether all Bill had and stood for, instead of holding him faster to life, perversely drove him to abandon it all.

If a man makes a go of it with Tower, Tower provides everything — a fashionable way of life, and the fashionable conformist ideas. It does a sort of brain washing job; he leads a grand existence, but he must be a yes - man toward it, hat in hand, bowing and scraping.

Bill's death points up this anomalous situation for Abe, who all of a sudden realizes he has lost the courage to call his mind his own. Before his rebellion runs its course, he finds neighbors, friends and people even closer infected by this general urge to wear the same universal, indistinguishable blank face, to submerge in the throng, to toe the mark.

The company pays the piper, and calls the tune; it's a system that allows no biological sports, no ugly ducking; stay in line or get out. This is a disturbing story of one of the kinds of pressure exerted on us to have no brave ideas, to kick over no traces, to think only what we're told to think.

FOR THE SKY

Dramatic Story Of The First War In The Air

THEY FOUGHT FOR THE SKY: The Dramatic Story of the First War in the Air. By Quentin Reynolds. Rinehart.

At the start of World War I, French and English together had under 200 planes, and the Germans alone the same number.

The boys bumped off rough fields in wire - strung crates, did observation duty, waggled their wings in knightly greeting to their opposite numbers. Then the French rigged up a machine gun to fire through the propeller, Fokker did likewise, and the air war was on.

It was still a zany way of life, or way of death. The first English casualty was Sergeant Major Jillings over French lines hit by a carbine bullet in the seat of the pants. Many an aviator, says Reynolds, was killed by being tumbled out of his bucking craft.

But the great names soon appeared: Boelcke, Immelmann and later Richhofen and Boss for the enemy, and for the Allies, Bishop, Ball, McCudden, Mannock, Lufbery, Rickenbacker, Luke, Prince, Nungesser, Fonck, Guynemer. Then there were the planes—Spad, Nieuport, Albatross, Camel. From America, a bit ridiculously, came the Liberty motor, practically a post-war contribution. The fliers were sharply contrasting individuals, sportsmen, lone wolves, team workers, killers.

Reynolds has compiled his story in a brisk journalistic style. The lessons learned then were basic in World War II, through perhaps this book will interest most the onetime boys who remember watching the dogs fights from their muddy trenches, or seeing the aces, their chests solidly plastered with ribbons, stars and palms, relax in Paris cafes.

DURABLE FIRE

Loves And Passions Make This Book's Appeal

THE DURABLE FIRE. By Howard Swiggett. Houghton Mifflin.

Lowry has been in wartime government service where, in one risky foray into Norway, he met and married beautiful Rosalie, refugee from Estonia. But the government doesn't build up a bank account for a man, and having some children to educate, and a book he yearns secretly to write, he takes the posh C. I. C. job.

Against the same sort of big-business background which has won Swiggett a sizable public, there take place some unbusiness-like activities: Stephen's long-time friend Jim Peale makes passes at Stephen's exotic wife and also at the C. I. C. cash box; another vice president prefers other men's wives to his own; Stephen and Rosalie both have pasts that rise up to plague them.

The high-power corporate framework does not interest me much. I can't care that the board chairman resigns in humiliation over a slip of his, and it is hard to believe that the board which could commit the colossal error that brings on the climax could also have the brains to recover from it.

So though this concerns the business world it's the unbusiness world into which Swiggett weaves the romance that keeps me reading his story. Board rooms are not the rooms in which I look for life and love and laughter. These people seem to me to act more naturally in their human relations than their business relations, too; for instance, I accept Stephen in the snow-bound hut but in Delano's office he acts stiff as a stick.

GOD'S FOOL

GOD'S FOOL By George N. Patterson (Doubleday, $3.50).

This is a story of a man and his utter trust in his God. It is warm, tender and faith pours from every page. Christ was not talking about a man of this caliber when he said, "Oh, ye of little faith."

George Patterson, a young Scot, believed so firmly in a day - by-day submission to God that he decided to give away his money and possession and rely completely on God "to guide and provide." I will not tell a single person . . . I won't dress differently, nor alter my style of living so as to suggest by implication that I am short of money, nor adopt any of the well-known and rather invidious means of drawning attention to my needs . . . anything I require will have to be supplied by God.

Medical studies and a journey to Tibet where he would spread God's word — this Patternson believed, was the life God asked him to lead. In training for this work and in reaching his destination, he wrestled with prodigious difficulties. Once on the Sino - Tibetan borden, he joined the entourage of a Tibetan chieftain. This led to his most serious problem.

For although Patterson could hold his own in riding and shooting matches, and although he could fend off the chieftain's attempts to marry him to a visitng Frenchwoman, he became — against his will — entangled in the chieftain's political life.

In Patterson's thinking politics were not part of an existence guided by God. Yet he felt that God recuired his help: he must make a rugged journey over a dangerous route to warn authorities in India of Communist strategy. His trip could save Southeast Asia . . . Was I prepared to obey God against generally accepted and even my own beliefs? To follow blindly in a complete abandonment of submission to the Divine Will, or trammel the Divine power with accepted shibboleths of human opinion?

AS IN DAYS OF OLD

Bedouin Camel Market Is Israel Tourist Draw

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

It takes a bit of hard Oriental haggling, but you can get a good one at the Arab camel market here for $165 (300 Israel pounds).

Scores of these "ships of the desert" are offered for sale every Thursday morning by Bedouin tribesmen who converge on the outdoor market from the surrounding Negev desert.

There is also some trading in donkeys, goats and sheep.

If you spot a camel you like, you grasp the hand of the owner in a firm handshake and hold it throughout the ensuring bargaining. It could be a 30 minute handshake

You offer half of what you expect to pay. He asks twice as much as he expects to get.

Sweep and Slap

When you've reached a price you are willing to pay, you let go of the seller's hand, slap it three times with a big sweep of your arm (the sweep's important) and —you've bought a camel.

The women take no part in the deals. They sit in small groups off to a side, nursing children and cooking food over open fires Many wear long chains of silver coins from their foreheads, symbols of their wealth.

BEACH FUN

Rewarding Shots Often Available

By JOHN OLDENBURG
Camera Editor

Again we turn to our friend of last week who furnished us with two of the best pictures we have had for a long time to demonstraet "Vacation time shooting."

This time we see Mr. Lee Estes has been to the beach and taken his favorite camera (Ikoflex) with him and used it to the best advantage . . . With his camera lens aperature set at F 22, a red filter in front of the lens and his shutter speed set at a 50th of a second. He came up with a very pleasing and interesting shot of his wife and two children wading in the waters of the Gulf.

Its' interesting to note that he did not cut his picture in half by putting the horizon right across the middle of the picture and also that his principal subjects were placed slightly below center to get away from the static idea that the main subject should be directly in the center of the picture. His red filter gave the sky and water a black tinge and made the white caps of the waves show up in a contrasting way.

Also the subjects being directly in the foreground gave the distance in the scene meaning. Shooting at a 50th of a second speed for his shutter gave just the slightest hint of motion in the waves and adds action to the entire story . . .

Thanks a million for this one, too, Lee, and keep that camera clicking. We need plenty more pictures like these to help us all in correcting some of our photo faults.

We are going on vacation this week and are planning to take along plenty of film and the Rollie so we'll be seeing you all through the lens . . .

THE PICNIC BOOK

This Book Makes Outdoor Eating More Enjoyable

THE PICNIC BOOK By Marian Tracy (Charles Scribner's Sons, $3.50).

Nearly everyone enjoys eating outdoors and particularly picnics. And now is the season to do it. Well if you enjoy it, here is a book you'll want because it is full of wonderful ideas for picnic meals that can be prepared and transported with a minimum of effort.

And if you can fix the food as Marian Tracy suggests in this book, no effort is involved in eating either, as the good is so good that the only trouble is knowing when to stop.

Mrs. Tracy makes the most of modern conveniences such as frozen food and ready - mixes, and suggests many ingenious short-cuts — no toiling over sandwiches in her kitchen. She also utilizes all the new efficient equipment for cooking, carrying and serving picnic food and for keeping things properly hot or cold. 100 picnic meals are given, with 200 recipes, and each menu includes not only a shopping list but a packing list, so that there is no risk of arriving at the beach having forgotten the rolls for the hamburgers or the opener for the beer.

Some of the picnics are prepared ahead of time, some are cooked on the spot, and some are assembled on the way and eaten by the roadside or shore. There are picnics planned for the terrace or patio and others for cars or boats. There are some very special picnics with a party flavor, and some unusual ones featuring Viennese, Greek, and Japanese cooking; also simple picnics for the very young with plenty of milk, and somewhat more sophisticated ones for two people, when there might be plenty of champagne. In short, a picnic to suit every enthusiast, and if you still belong to the school that thinks picnics mean smoke in the eyes, sand in the sandwiches, and ants in the potato salad, this book should convince you that modern-style outdoor eating is not only different but much more fun.

Ireland Honors Native Author In Stamp Issue

Tomas O Criomhthain (Thomas O'Crohan), famed fisherman - author, has been honored philatelically by his native Eire with two new stamps. O'Crohan's autobiography, "An t-Oileanach," (The Islandman), achieved international recognition.

A potrait of O' Crohan appears on the adhesive. The denominations are 2 pence and 5 pence.

Collectors in this country desiring first day covers may write to Irish Cachet Covers, 947 East 32nd St., Brooklyn 10, N. Y. Cost per-cover with complete set of stamps is 50 cents.

West Germany has issued a new stamp commemorating the 1,000th anniversary of the founding of the collegiate church of St. Peter and Alexander. The stamp shows the town seal of 1332. The value is 20 pfennigs. Another new issue for West Germany is a 10 pfennig honoring the University of Freiburg.

For the American First Day convention in Newark, N. J., on Aug. 3 and 4, a special set of three engraved envelopes will be available. They will feature Abraham Lincoln and a map of New Jersey. The U. S. post office department will operate a sub- station at the convention where all mail will be postmarked with a special convention cancellation. Two countries have issued new stamps for the International Geophysical Year. Japan's 10 yen depicts the official IGY insignia, a penguin, and the Japanese expedition ship, "Soya."

Norway has issued three in its set. The 25 ore shows Jan Mayen Island, the 35 ore a map of Svalbard, and the 65 ore a map of the South Pole area emphasizing Queen Maud Land.

Austria has issued two new stamps, reports Edwin Mueller. A one schilling grey commemorates the 50th anniversary of Postal Bus Service in Austria. The design shows a small bus used in 1907 when this service was inaugurated and a large modern bus in use today. These buses provide postal service on most of Austria's highways.

A one schilling dark brown pays tribute to the 800th anniversary of Mariazell Basilica. Depicted is the church of Mariazell which is visited by thousands of pilgrims each year.

Stamp notes . . . The Netherlands Antilles commemorates the first Caribbean conference on mental health by issuing three new stamps. Depicted on each are scenes from the Netherlands Windward Island . . . From behind the Bamboo Curtain comes word that Communist China has issued a set of stamps to commemorate the first motor trucks off the assembly lines at Changchun .

Guide To Good Reading Now At The Ouachita Parish Public Library

FRANCES FLANDERS, Librarian

The field of non - fiction is an ever broadening one and there seems to be no end too the subjects about which books are being written. Among the additions to the library collection of the past week are books on a variety of subjects. There is certain to be someone who needs each one of them. A new book with a very provocative title is called "Go It Alone Lady" and was written by Edith Patterson Meyer. This book was written by a lady who likes to travel alone and she answers all of the questions which women usually ask about such hazards as foreign money, hotel and travel accommodations, possible loneliness or illness, and language difficulties. If you are planning a trip to Europe, especially alone, you really need to see this book.

A very valuable addition to the reference collection is "The Photographic History of the Civil War" by Francis Trevelyan Miller. This is a reprint of a set of books which came out in 1910 in 10 volumes. It has now been published in five volumes, each book containing two of the original volumes. There is a new introduction by Henry Steel Commager. This is one of the most complete publications that I have ever seen and will be a most valuable addition to our reference collection. As Mr. Commager says in his introduction, almost everyone is interested in the Civil War and I am glad that we have this set of books for our public to use.

A very fine book for those interested in architecture is called "Small Commercial Buildings." It gives beautiful photographs and floor plans for many outstanding small buildings such as nurseries, flower shops, offices, railroad stations, gas stations, and banks. If you are planning to build any of these you and your architect will enjoy using this book. Another beautiful and practical book is called "Designing Small Boats" and was written by V. B. Crockett. This should be extremely popular because of our beautiful Ouachita river traffic.

Books About Hobbies

We are happy that among our new books this week are several which deal with various hobbies. John J. Floherty has written a most interesting new book called "Aviation from the Ground Up" which will have a definite value to aviation enthusiasts. "Standard Handbook of Stamp Collecting" by Richard Mcp. Cabeen is a very fine introduction to this hobby which has numerous enthusiasts in the Twin Cities. "Tropical Fish in Your Home" by Herbert R. Axelrood is a very useful as well as colorful book. Many people are interested in this hobby and will be happy to know that we have this book. For the past few weeks numerous high school boys have asked for books on sport car racing. We have several on the subject and this week we have added another, written by Louis Klemantaski and Michael Frostick. This book is profusely illustrated and if this is your hobby, you will surely want to see this book.

Those interested in popular music will be glad to know that we have two new books on the subject. One is called "The Story of Jazz" and was written by Marshall Stearns. The other is "Panorama of American Popular Music" compiled by David Ewen. The letter book is written from a historical standpoint and is most interesting.

Books Of a Historical Nature

Students of history will welcome several new additions to our collection. One is "A Popular History of the Reformation" written by Philip Hughes. This is a very readable book and makes clear many of the facets of this momentous struggle. "Devil's Brood' by Alfred Duggan is a very interesting history of Plantagenet England and the rulers of that time. Mr. Duggan is a very fine writter and he makes the period alive. "Meeting Prehistoric Man" by G. H. R. von Koenigswald is an interesting account of the search for early man whitten by a scientist who has had personal experience in the field.

The World In Which We Live

Books which let in new light on the world in which we find ourselves living today are always eagerly read by our patrons. "A Student's Diary; Budapest Oct. 16-Nov. 1, 1956" by Laszlo Beke is a first hand and factual account of the events which took place in Hungary last fall. Reading it makes us appreciate our American freedoms. "Battle for the Mind'" by William Sargant is an alarming book which explains the technique used in brain washing. It is also a helpful book, foretells us how to resist these techniques. "Atoms for the World" by Laura Fermi is an intimate and informative account of the international conference on peaceful uses of the atom which took place in Geneva in 1955. It is a very fine discussion of the subject. "The Turn of the Tide, 1939-1943'" by Arthur Bryant is a very fine history of the war years in Britain, based on the diaries of Field-Marshal Lord Alanbrooke. "The Unforgotten" by Ilse Stamley is an account of her efforts to rescue prisoners from the Gestapo prison camps in World War II. It is not pleasant reading, but is very moving.

VANISHING PROFESSION

Oriental Sedan Chairs Dying Transport Mode

By LEN LEFKOW

HONG KONG (AP)— Twelve old men are living out their days in a job with no future. When they die, the ancient Oriental mode of transportation, the sedan chair, will pass away with them.

These dozen men, remnants of thousands who once made a living carting humans up Hong Kong's steep hills in chair, are wrinkled and tired men. All are well over 50. They look older.

They can be seen daily squatting alongside their six shabby chairs waiting for passengers. Few come nowadays. Each chair, manned by two men, gets perhaps one or two passengers a day. Some days they go without a fare.

A slow, bouncing ride for a few blocks up an incline costs about one dollar (17 cents U. S.). Passengers occasionally give their rag - attired bearers an added few cents as a tip.

"But things have changed," says one, a 55-year-old barefoot Chinese who has been at his trade since he was 18. "Once upon a time we'd get ten dollars ($1.70 U. S.) from a passenger."

"They were the golden days," he says, his eyes flashing back into the past when more than 800 brightly painted sedan chairs were licensed and did a booming business carting people up hills.

By 1949, taxis and buses had reduced the number to 27. The 1954 figure was 20 and in 1955 only eight were left.

NO RECOURSE

If The Highway Man Says Move, Get Ready To Pack

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE, June 29 (AP)—If a man from the state Highway Department offers to buy your house, start packing. You can't beat them, not even in court.

When they say they need your land for a new road, they're not kidding. There's one consolation. They do their best to give you a fair price.

Before they approach you, the right of way department has:

1. Made a complete study of title information, surveyed the land to know exactly how much is needed and who owns it.

2. Employed qualified appraisers from your area to determine the value of the land and improvements.

Can Get It Quickly

They're getting ready to move in and start building a road, and they can take over quickly under Louisiana law, if they need to.

If right of way is not donated or sold at the price determined by the local appraiser, often the owner will give the department right of entry, permitting them to build the road while the courts determine the price to be paid.

Even if the owner refuses, the department can file an expropriation suit and move right in.

"The court has no authority to make the Highway Department move the route," explained right of way attorney Ross Banister, "it can only set the value of the damages, unless the owner can show some illegal act by the Highway Department.

Right Of Entry

"On unimproved property," he continued, "we have immediate right on entry when the suit is filed. On improved proptrty, we can enter after 30 days. The law was changed in 1954 to permit this, instead of a delay until the suit was settled, which sometimes held us up for many months."

Banister said, "the right of expropriation is an inherent power of government. It's the same proposition that sends our boys overseas. Without it, we couldn't build roads to sustain our economy."

He added, "I should emphasize the suit is filed against the land, not any individual."

Paul Lirette, right of way engineer, said "we want to pay the owner what he is entitled to — the market value of the land.

If we offered less and tried to horse trade, the owner might feel we would take it for that price anyway. That way we might be unfair to somebody."

Banister added, "it's not the business of the department to bargain. The Federal Bureau of Public roads doesn't want us to skin a property owner any more that the department does. We want to protect the public, but he's part of the public too."

"Many owners feel they should be paid what it is worth to them in convenience, or for sentimental value," Lirette said.

"We can no more compensate them for this kind of damages than we could the merchant who is hurt when the road moves away from his store," Banister said.

AT WORKSHOP

Modern Living And Science Underscored

Science and its impact on modern living will be underscored at a science workshop offered by Northeast State from Monday, July 8 through July 13.

Daily sessions are scheduled from 1 to 4 p.m. in the airconditioned faculty lounge of the Administration Building except on Saturday when the group will meet at a morning period to be announced.

The workshop offers one semester hour of credit in Education 141 for persons who attend all sessions and meet other requirements. The conference is open, however, to anyone desiring to attend without working for college credit.

General Discussions

On the workshop agenda are talks, general discussions, use of audio-visual aids, and displays. Participating on the program will be state and local speakers who are experienced in various fields of science. The group is to include personnel in industry, teaching, library science, and highway safety.

Discussions and demonstrations will show the influence of science in changing modern living. Emphasis will be given to science offered high school students, teaching science methods of getting parents interested in this field, the elementary science teacher, audio-visual aids suitable for this study, application of science to highway safety, and other topics.

Construction of a science unit, public library readings in science, and news in this field will round out the week's program.

2,600 Persons Being Sheltered By Red Cross

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Red Cross report made public by the White House today said the relief agency at Lake Charles, La., is now sheltering 1,600 people from Cameron Parish in the hurricane area.

The same report said more than 1,000 others from the same parish are being sheltered in other sections.

Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, chairman of the Red Cross who went to the hurricane area last night, prepared the report.

The White House also announced appreciation on behalf of President Eisenhower and the American people of a relief gift of $50,000 from the Canadian Red Cross. The Canadian society said it is willing to consider further assistance after a survey determines actual needs.

Gruenther said 74 disaster specialists from the National Red Cross staff are on the job as well as hundreds of Red Cross volunteers. Food drops to stranded victims are being made by small planes and helicopters.

VITAL WORK

City Linemen Risk Lives On Everyday Assignments

By JIMMY HATTEN
Staff Writer

A "live wire" shooting off 4,000 volts of electricity in an eerie shower of sparks dances in the street.

Within minutes, a Monroe lineman is risking his life as he stands on a "suicide board" high in the air, parallel to a power line pole. He begins disconnecting the wire that is grounded as bolts of lightning illuminate the scene.

He may be W. E. (Red) Perry, a 10-year veteran of the creosote poles and rubber gloves, or any one of the 20-plus city linemen whose job it is to keep your lights burning, and the populace safe from electricity run berserk.

Lineman Peery and his co-workers are on call 24-hours a day in case of emergencies.

"Most of all," says Red, "we hate lightning." And with good reason. For when there is lightning and electricity, the chances for injury sky-rocket. One without the other is job enough, according to linemen.

Lineman's Duty

Power for your convenience. Power that makes you safe, secure and comfortable.

But to provide that power, an all-important unit has to be ever on the alert.

When Hurricane Audrey rumbled through Monroe Thursday night —even though most of its strength was spent—linemen had to work feverishly to keep the city supplied with electricity.

Some 270 calls jammed the electric department's wires with reports of power failure, lines down or limbs on wires. Line crews worked throughout the night, and no part of the town suffered for any long periods of time due to any of the outages.

Most Perilous

It is severe thunderstorms, however, that prove the most perilous. With the chance of being struck by lightning or of the lightning running down a wire too a hapless worker, occupational hazards increase tremendously. Lineman Red Peery is well qualified to speak of the occupational hazards.

As he answered power failure calls during the hurricane Thursday night, his mind wandered back to a night two years ago. On the night of June 27, 1955—exactly two years before the hurricane— a severe thunderstorm struck Monroe, bringing with it high winds.

Red was dispatched to 11th and Adams Streets, where a "live wire" lay dangling in the street. As he began the repair job he came in direct contact with electricity.

It was 7:30 p.m. He didn't know when the shock hit him. He knew nothing until two hours later when he came to in a hospital bed.

Long Recuperating

He lay there three months recuperating from a broken arm, fractured pelvis, other fractures and burns. He had been knocked from the pole to concrete below. A year or two before he was injured when a pole broke from under him.

But the risks are calculated. All precautionary measures are taken to protect the lineman.

When necessary, he wears rubber gloves, boots. "Suicide boards" are raised to a level with the power lines when climbing a pole would be dangerous due to wetness.

"Hot sticks" are employed when a wire is so dangerous that a lineman dares not handle it. By use of a hot stick, the lineman reduces the amount of wire handling.

Still the danger is there. But it has to be met if your home is to be supplied with power for your convenience and safety.

But in the end, a lineman is paid off. For with the years, there comes advancement. Supervisor Woodrow Murphy rose from lineman's helper, to lineman, and on up to his present position.

So did his assistant supervisor, C. W. Whetstone, sub-station and meter superintendent. And still another — J. M. Bell, line superintendent, who has charge of the department's four crews.

The linemen themselves have to be trained technicians. In fact some of the city's linemen held supervisory capacities in other cities.

To become a lineman, there is five years of working under linemen — first as helper — then four years of apprenticeship.

The training pays off in skilled craftsmen. Says Supervisor Murphy, "I think we have the best organization of linemen in the South."

Possibly as you are reading this a Monroe lineman is handling a "live wire," as he and his co-workers work to convince you of Mr. Murphy's statement.

Home Official's Brother Dies

At the offices of the Louisiana Baptist Children's home yesterday it was reported that word had come from Supt. D. C. Black that some days ago he ws summoned to Oxford, Miss., where an older brother, D. G. Black, was seriously ill.

The word came just as Superintendent Black and Mrs. Black had secured their tickets for Atlantic City to attend the national Kiwanis International Convention.

They hurried to the bedside of the brother, but death came soon after they arrived.

ELUDING DEATH

Couple, 7 Children Spend Terrifying Hours In Storm

A Bosco construction worker, his wife and seven children spent 24 terrifying hours eluding death as Hurricane Audrey roared through the Gulf Coast town of Cameron Thursday.

C. W. Hare, Jr., and his family were rescued Friday from the Cameron Parish courthouse where thousands of refugees huddled from the storm.

Mrs. Hare said they were taken to Lakes Charles by an oil tanker just a few hours before the courthouse sank 10 feet into the mud.

Some of the men left the courthouse after the height of the storm had passed and rescued nine children who were being swept away by floodwaters as they clung to wooden objects, Mrs. Hare said.

Scene Of Death

"Brothers, sisters and mothers of neighbors of ours were found under houses, drowned," she said.

"I'm still in a daze. It's like something you read in the papers or see on TV, if it weren't so real."

Oil pipelines burst and contaminated water filled the courthouse, reported the 38 - year - old housewife. "The only water we had to drink had been caught in containers from Venetian blinds."

The Hare family lost everything they had in the storm, including their car and about $3500 to $4000 worth of clothing. At present, they are living with Mr. Hare's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hare, Sr., at Bosco.

The family escaped unhurt from the disaster. The children are: James, 18; John, 15; Joyce, 13; Anna Lois, 10; Dan Henry, 7; Virgil, 3 and Patricia Ann, 2.

Mrs. Hare said rescue squads found 70 persons who had taken shelter in the attic and rooftop of one house.

Food Collected Here Destined For Storm Area

About 15 cases of food collected by the Monroe-West Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce will be taken to the Hurricane - stricken area of Lake Charles today.

Guy Jones, vice - president of the organization said donations would be taken through today. He said persons wishing to contribute should call FA 5-2784 and someone will pick the items up.

The food, mostly canned goods, will be given to Salvation Army workers who will distribute it among the disaster victims.

Jones said twin cities citizens "did a good job" of answering the appeal for food stuffs.

VITAL WORK

City Linemen Risk Lives On Everyday Assignments

By JIMMY HATTEN
Staff Writer

A "live wire" shooting off 4,000 volts of electricity in an eerie shower of sparks dances in the street.

A terrified housewife clutches her two children to her as she places a frantic call to the City Electric Department.

Within minutes, a Monroe lineman is risking his life as he stands on a "suicide board" high in the air, parallel to a power line pole. He begins disconnecting the wire that is grounded as bolts of lightning illuminate the scene.

He may be W. E. (Red) Perry, a 10-year veteran of the creosote poles and rubber gloves, or any one of the 20-plus city linemen whose job it is to keep your lights burning, and the populace safe from electricity run berserk.

Lineman Peery and his co-workers are on call 24-hours a day in case of emergencies.

"Most of all," says Red, "we hate lightning." And with good reason. For when there is lightning and electricity, the chances for injury sky-rocket. One without the other is job enough, according to linemen.

Lineman's Duty

The lineman's duty is to climb poles, install wires, transformers and other electric equipment necessary to the transmission of power to your home.

Power for your convenience. Power that makes you safe, secure and comfortable.

But to provide that power, an all-important unit has to be ever on the alert.

When Hurricane Audrey rumbled through Monroe Thursday night —even though most of its strength was spent—linemen had to work feverishly to keep the city supplied with electricity.

Some 270 calls jammed the electric department's wires with reports of power failure, lines down or limbs on wires. Line crews worked throughout the night, and no part of the town suffered for any long periods of time due to any of the outages.

Most Perilous

It is severe thunderstorms, however, that prove the most perilous. With the chance of being struck by lightning or of the lightning running down a wire too a hapless worker, occupational hazards increase tremendously. Lineman Red Peery is well qualified to speak of the occupational hazards.

As he answered power failure calls during the hurricane Thursday night, his mind wandered back to a night two years ago. On the night of June 27, 1955—exactly two years before the hurricane— a severe thunderstorm struck Monroe, bringing with it high winds.

Red was dispatched to 11th and Adams Streets, where a "live wire" lay dangling in the street. As he began the repair job he came in direct contact with electricity.

It was 7:30 p.m. He didn't know when the shock hit him. He knew nothing until two hours later when he came to in a hospital bed.

Long Recuperating

He lay there three months recuperating from a broken arm, fractured pelvis, other fractures and burns. He had been knocked from the pole to concrete below. A year or two before he was injured when a pole broke from under him.

But the risks are calculated. All precautionary measures are taken to protect the lineman.

When necessary, he wears rubber gloves, boots. "Suicide boards" are raised to a level with the power lines when climbing a pole would be dangerous due to wetness.

"Hot sticks" are employed when a wire is so dangerous that a lineman dares not handle it. By use of a hot stick, the lineman reduces the amount of wire handling.

Still the danger is there. But it has to be met if your home is to be supplied with power for your convenience and safety.

But in the end, a lineman is paid off. For with the years, there comes advancement. Supervisor Woodrow Murphy rose from lineman's helper, to lineman, and on up to his present position.

So did his assistant supervisor, C. W. Whetstone, sub-station and meter superintendent. And still another — J. M. Bell, line superintendent, who has charge of the department's four crews.

The linemen themselves have to be trained technicians. In fact some of the city's linemen held supervisory capacities in other cities.

To become a lineman, there is five years of working under linemen — first as helper — then four years of apprenticeship.

The training pays off in skilled craftsmen. Says Supervisor Murphy, "I think we have the best organization of linemen in the South."

Possibly as you are reading this a Monroe lineman is handling a "live wire," as he and his co-workers work to convince you of Mr. Murphy's statement.

Home Official's Brother Dies

At the offices of the Louisiana Baptist Children's home yesterday it was reported that word had come from Supt. D. C. Black that some days ago he ws summoned to Oxford, Miss., where an older brother, D. G. Black, was seriously ill.

The word came just as Superintendent Black and Mrs. Black had secured their tickets for Atlantic City to attend the national Kiwanis International Convention.

They hurried to the bedside of the brother, but death came soon after they arrived.

A few days after the funeral they proceeded to the East to the convention.

Couple, 7 Children Spend Terrifying Hours In Storm

A Bosco construction worker, his wife and seven children spent 24 terrifying hours eluding death as Hurricane Audrey roared through the Gulf Coast town of Cameron Thursday.

C. W. Hare, Jr., and his family were rescued Friday from the Cameron Parish courthouse where thousands of refugees huddled from the storm.

Mrs. Hare said they were taken to Lakes Charles by an oil tanker just a few hours before the courthouse sank 10 feet into the mud.

Some of the men left the courthouse after the height of the storm had passed and rescued nine children who were being swept away by floodwaters as they clung to wooden objects, Mrs. Hare said.

Scene Of Death

"Brothers, sisters and mothers of neighbors of ours were found under houses, drowned," she said.

"I'm still in a daze. It's like something you read in the papers or see on TV, if it weren't so real."

Oil pipelines burst and contaminated water filled the courthouse, reported the 38 - year - old housewife. "The only water we had to drink had been caught in containers from Venetian blinds."

The Hare family lost everything they had in the storm, including their car and about $3500 to $4000 worth of clothing. At present, they are living with Mr. Hare's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hare, Sr., at Bosco.

The family escaped unhurt from the disaster. The children are: James, 18; John, 15; Joyce, 13; Anna Lois, 10; Dan Henry, 7; Virgil, 3 and Patricia Ann, 2.

Mrs. Hare said rescue squads found 70 persons who had taken shelter in the attic and rooftop of one house.

Food Collected Here Destined For Storm Area

About 15 cases of food collected by the Monroe-West Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce will be taken to the Hurricane - stricken area of Lake Charles today.

Guy Jones, vice - president of the organization said donations would be taken through today. He said persons wishing to contribute should call FA 5-2784 and someone will pick the items up.

The food, mostly canned goods, will be given to Salvation Army workers who will distribute it among the disaster victims.

Jones said twin cities citizens "did a good job" of answering the appeal for food stuffs.

HOGAN, YOU UNDERSTAND, DON'T YOU, THAT IF PRINCESS SNOWFLOWER WERE IN THE UNITED STATES AS AN INVITED HEAD OF STATE, HER ACTIONS WOULD HAVE TO FOLLOW DIPLOMATIC PROTOCOL

OF COURSE, CANYON! - WHICH IS EXACTLY WHY I HAD HER ENTER THE COUNTRY AS A TOURIST!
